Prosperity? Truth, Please? Voltaire Sold Stockings Words Lack Power No Bonus; Too Expensive

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921

Otto H. Kahn, of international finance, runs the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, which he owns. His real specialty is money, not music. That he knows his specialty is proved by his gathering together many millions. Good or bad times do not affect him, for no one man can eat more than a million dollars' worth of terrapin. And Kahn will always have at least one million.

He says he sees signs of prosperity. Does he? What are the signs? He says (what you know) that the Versailles peace is responsible for much of the trouble. When you force seventy million skilled German workers to work on a Chinese labor basis—for just enough to keep alive—you invite trouble for the rest of the world.

But ARE there real signs of prosperity? "America looms large as an actual potential factor," etc. She does, but what becomes of her potency if she hasn't any customers?

When a farmer calls a veterinary to look at the cow, he wants to know how sick the cow is. It doesn't help the farmer or the cow to say, "That's a fine cow, of much potency." The question is, how sick is she and can you CURE her?

Our national cow is sick, and our only veterinary, the national government, ought to show more signs of realizing it.

Solemn prediction. The idea of knickerbockers for women will spread, especially for business women.

It is a good idea, and men are always ready for something new—that's to their credit.

If only somebody understood knickerbocker salesmanship as well as old Voltaire understood selling silk stockings. When he moved to Ferney, on the Swiss border, he had his own safety in mind. When then he wanted to burn him in France he could step into Switzerland. When deeply earnest Swiss Protestants began to think he might make a good bonfire he could step back to France. He thought of the poor people around him as well as of himself, started various factories, including a silk stocking factory, to give the peasants work. To every old countess, marquise and duchess that he knew—and he knew many, for his youth was gay—he wrote along this line: "I shall never be happy or think my life well spent until I see a pair of those beautiful stockings on your ankle, which alone is worthy to display them." He usually got an order for ten dozen. Salesmen on ladies' knickerbockers take notice. Write to the dollar marquises of Newport, Palm Beach Shore, Burlingame, the Back Bay, etc.

Mr. Beck tells the Bar Association that the world is lawless, and quotes crimes statistics to prove it. He sees in the United States Constitution the chief protection "for the rights of the individual."

The Constitution can't prevent a holdup on the highway or in the price-fixing board of directors' meeting.

The Constitution in itself has little power. It depends on silk-robed justices that interpret it. Once the Constitution said you mustn't interfere with slavery. It changed its mind. Later it said you couldn't tax great incomes. It changed its mind. It says you can't protect children from mills that exploit their labor. It will change its mind on that.

Just now, with a conservative majority on the Supreme Bench, we have a conservative Constitution. When the next big political shakeup comes, in twelve or sixteen years, you will have a radical Supreme Court and a radical Constitution. Written words are nothing, living men decide. Ask the ghost of the Czar, of Louis XVI. or of Charles I.

Two such men as Brandeis and Holmes on the Supreme Court bench mean more to individual freedom than anything in the Constitution. Let them speak and write minority opinions that moderate the conservatism of the majority.

The soldiers of New York, as of other States, were told, with flowing tears, bands playing, flags waving, wild emotion, that NOW, EVER, nothing would be too good for them.

With much urging, New York voted a small bonus. Now New York's high court says that is unconstitutional—the men cannot have their money. The Constitution is useful, when it comes to protecting you from a bonus for soldiers, but you notice that it does not interfere with raising railroad rates.

A learned court decides that a reasonable rent rate is 10 per cent. net profit on the investment. A great street car trust, wishing to extend payment on about forty million dollars of notes, is told, "You can have the money at 8 per cent."

The nation is on a usury basis. That's a bad thing, for it

YOUTH IN PERILS SAVED BY POLICE

Accused of Stabbing in Crap Play; Mob of Whites and Blacks Subdued

The arrival of two patrol wagons from Stations 1 and 2 at Atlantic avenue and State street, shortly before noon today, prevented what threatened to be the first lynching in the history of Boston.

Replying to a riot call turned in from that corner, the officers are reported to have found a furious crowd of two hundred whites and blacks surrounding Jay C. Tyson, 38, No. 216 Dover street, South End, colored stevedore, whose arms they had bound, and whom they were preparing to hang to one of the pillars of the Elevated structure.

Without waiting orders the officers leaped from the wagon and with clubs handy waded into the mob which was shouting "lynch him." The police rescued the threatened man.

According to the story as gathered by the police after the mob had been dispersed and the district had quieted down, negro stevedores were spending their noon hour in a game of crap.

Tyson is alleged to have started a quarrel with a man named Jesse Budds, No. 114 West Newton street, Back Bay, and after hot words had been passed, to have drawn a jack knife and stabbed Budds in the back.

Seeing that Budds appeared to be badly hurt, Tyson tied up Milk street with a rapidly growing crowd on his heels. He made the entire circuit of the block and was overtaken as he reached Atlantic avenue again.

None one in the crowd had a rope, and this is alleged to have been found fastened round his arms, while members of the crowd looked for another with which to string him up to the Elevated structure.

Tyson was locked up, charged with assault. Budds was taken to the City Hospital, where it is said his hurt is not serious.

SEEK TO ENFORCE CLAIM AGAINST STATE

The Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins Corporation, in a petition filed in the Superior Court against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, ask the right to enforce a claim for $56,000 against the Commonwealth for alleged breach of contract in the construction of the great drydock at South Boston, which before the completion was taken over by the United States government.

CORCORAN ACCUSER SUES WIFE OF AUTO

Scott M. W. Paul, Who Demands $75,000 of Former Official, Seeks Divorce

Who is the mysterious millionaire alleged to have paid Attorney William J. Corcoran, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, $50,000 in settlement of an alienation suit?

This question was puzzling members of the legal fraternity in Greater Boston today as a result of the filing of a suit for $75,000 against Corcoran, by Scott M. W. Paul of Methuen.

It became known today that Paul has brought suit for divorce in Salem Court against his wife, Mrs. Blanche Paul, who is said to have been living in Boston's Back Bay since leaving her husband and two children two years ago.

Mrs. Paul, who was Blanche Lavigne of Lawrence, was married six years ago at the age of fifteen, and according to her husband left him frequently for intervals of a week or two during the four years they lived together.

GOT ONLY $5,000.

A Boston man, who recently inherited a fortune, is said to have paid Attorney Corcoran $50,000 in settlement of an alienation suit which Paul brought a year ago. According to Paul he was unaware of this man's identity until recently and believed that a much smaller sum was involved.

His suit against Corcoran is said to be based on the fact that the attorney got only $5,000, or one-tenth of the total amount, and it is understood the Supreme Court will be asked to order that the exact sum received be disclosed.

Furthermore an attempt will be made to force Corcoran to account to Paul for the sum which he is alleged to have received as his fee for bringing about an amicable disposition of the controversy without court action and without publicity.

Paul said that last Summer a friend informed him that his wife was going about with a group of wealthy men in Boston, and it was this friend who introduced him to Corcoran. Last Fall Paul said, he was called to the former District attorney's office, and told that his suit for alienation of affections had been settled and that he would receive $5,000.

ATTACHED FUNDS.

He declared he was told the defendant was a Cape Cod man, and that he never knew the man's true identity until a former Corcoran and Ward agent, whose name he also will not reveal, informed him differently.

Paul filed an attachment for $75,000 against Corcoran's property in the Suffolk Registry of Deeds, through his counsel, William H. Garland. A trustee's writ has been served on the Beacon and Tremont Trust Companies, in which Corcoran is said to have deposits.

Paul, is thirty years old and for some years was a motorman employed by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company. He is now engaged in the milk business in Methuen.

Paul was found by an American reporter working as a farmhand on the Livingstone farm, Lowell street, Methuen. He refused to discuss any phase of the case.

APOLOGIZE FOR THEFT OF AUTO

Polite Gunmen Get a Ride and Then Dump Owner on the Road

Robbed in the politest fashion imaginable of a $3,500 automobile and $2 in cash by two modern Dick Turpins, or Knights of the Road, William C. St. George of No. 10 Billerica street, Lowell, today asked the police of the Hanover street station to find his missing machine for him.

The car is a five-seated touring build, and bears the Massachusetts registration number of 92,642.

The story told police detectives by St. George needs only to be shifted a few years into the past, a coach and four substituted for the modern auto and Hampstead Heath for the road from Lowell to Boston, to read like an account of a stage coach robbery of "the good old days."

HOP IN, BROTHER.

Accompanied by his friend, Harry Willis of No 725 Lawrence street, Lowell, St. George left home late last evening bound for Boston on a business trip. As his car passed through the suburbs of Lowell two men, well-dressed, soft-spoken and outwardly most gentlemanly in appearance, stepped into the roadway and one of them, raising his hand, asked the driver of the car for a "lift to Bedford."

"Sure," replied St. George, "hop in."

Nothing unpleasant happened until the car neared the outskirts of Bedford. There as they were passing through a dark stretch of the road, one of the strangers leaned forward, St. George felt the muzzle of a pistol pressed into his neck.

"Better stop the car," said the stranger. "We need the money you have.

While the gun stayed in place the other stranger searched both Willis and St. George. Neither man had any money to speak of and the booty was $2.

When the search was over the stranger with the gun said politely:

"Now, if it is perfectly satisfactory to you we'll drive on."

WAITING AT THE SQUARE.

So the automobile rolled on through the night until Watertown was reached. At that place the stranger with the gun murmured, still most politely:

"Pardon me, but this is far enough for you. If you and Mr. Willis will leave the car now and come round to Adams square, Boston, at say, seven o'clock in the morning, you will find the machine waiting for you."

Protests were useless, so out of the car crawled St. George and his friend. They went to Adams square as directed, but though they waited two hours the car did not appear.

CUNEO DRIVE NETS $18,800 IN 18 DAYS

The eighteenth day of the Boston American's drive for a fund for the widow and nine children of Patrolman Andrew B. Cuneo today resulted in a total of $18,808.56. The daily contributions have averaged better than $1,000, a pace that shatters all previous fund records in this city.

Allen R. Frederick, chairman of the Boston American Cuneo Fund Committee, who has put in more time than any other member of the committee, sent his personal check for $100. Joseph Santosuosso contributed $25 yesterday and the C. Brigham Company, milk dealers, gave $50.

The most remarkable contribution to the fund was the $1,402.88 turned in last evening by Andrew A. Badaracco, who like former Mayor Fitzgerald and Mr. Frederick has been tolling night and day for the cause.

DROPPED OWN BUSINESS.

Mr. Badaracco dropped his own business and made a canvass of the firms along Canal street. He conceived the idea of a "community contribution," and, before he got through individuals and concerns doing business in the vicinity of the North Station had piled up by far the largest neighborhood contribution made to the fund. No other section of the city even approached the business map on Canal street and adjacent thoroughfares. It was quite a local achievement.

The Dutch Lodge of Elks gave a check for $200 which was added to Committeeman Badaracco's fee. This and Rust of the Red Sox are expected to umpire.

PREMIER CALLS CABINET ON IRISH REPLY

Inverness, Scotland, Sept. 2.—Premier Lloyd George interrupted his holiday today to hold a conference with King George upon the Irish peace situation. The premier sent copies of De Valera's reply to the members of the British cabinet at London. The cabinet has been summoned to meet here on Wednesday.

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 2.—Although the Sinn Fein note, which was delivered to Premier Lloyd George in Scotland yesterday, has not been published, it was understood today to be in a very conciliatory vein.

It is believed the preliminary arrangements will have been completed within a week for the coming Sinn Fein envoys to confer with the Premier.

There is no incompatibility between recognition of Ireland's right to independence and a close bond of union between Ireland and England," said the Irish bulletin, official organ of the Sinn Fein.

"The Irish accept the fact that Great Britain and Ireland are closely linked. In view of which the people of Ireland would not do anything to disturb the mutual interests.

"Ireland is a weak country and England is a strong one, which would make for natural friendship. What-

Rumor Kaiser Has Escaped From Dutch

By International News Service

Paris, Sept. 2.—The newspaper L'Intransigeant today printed an unconfirmed rumor that the ex-Kaiser had escaped from Holland in an airplane. According to L'Intransigeant, the information was received from Torino, Italy, in a telephone message.

Belief was expressed that the report had its origin in the increased activity on the part of monarchists and militarists in Germany, following the assassination of Erzberger.

Dispatch of several messages from the erstwhile war lord at Doorn to army officers at Berlin recently caused Great Britain to send a note to Holland that the ex-Kaiser's action was a breach of his promise to have nothing to do with politics in Germany.

MERCURY SOARING TOWARD 90 MARK

The record for the hottest September 2 in the history of the local weather bureau was in peril of being smashed by the climbing mercury today.

Starting at seven o'clock, when the official thermometer recorded 67 degrees, the figures had jumped to 81 by eleven o'clock and were still going up.

Boston was the hottest spot in New England today, and not far behind the warmest city in the country, Galveston, Tex.

The humidity registered 82 per cent. at 11 o'clock.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN IS RESCUED AT SEA

BIG BATTLE REPORTED IN LOGAN

U. S. Regulars Ordered Into West Virginia by War Department

By International News Service.

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Furious fighting is in progress at Blair Mountain and Crooked Creek. Casualties have occurred at both points.

Six prisoners were captured by the Loganites at Blair Mountain this morning. Colonel W. E. Eubanks' latest communique at 10:20 a. m. said: "We are sitting pretty tight. We have a jail full of prisoners. Logan will hold the lines until the Federal troops arrive."

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Federal troops were today ordered into West Virginia to disperse the armed bands of miners who are threatening an invasion of the Mingo county coal regions there.

Major-General Harbord, acting chief of staff, announced that he has ordered the 19th Infantry from Camp Sherman, Ohio, and the 26th Infantry from Camp Dix, N. J., to proceed immediately to West Virginia.

By International News Service

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Aerial bombs were dropped by Logan defence aeroplanes early today.

The T. N. T. bombs caused a hasty retreat of miners from the Hewitt's Creek concentration point, but no casualties among the defenders, were reported. The bombs fell near the houses occupied by the "Redsnecks" army. Two planes were in action, and four bombs were dropped.

It is assumed here that no attempt was made to destroy houses or lives, but that the heavy explosive was used to warn the miners what would occur if they attempted to storm the Logan borders today.

The planes left Logan about daylight with four big bombs swinging underneath. They carried no marking location of points headquarters desired to bomb for "moral effect."

The ships soared on over the front at a great height. When they came in the vicinity of the miners they dived suddenly, loosed a number of bombing and let the missiles of destruction fall.

Consternation and confusion resulted. It was declared by pilots the miners were thrown into almost a state of panic.

The front line at Crooked Creek saw the result of the bomb explosions.

After the arrivas of the planes the miners' advance was checked. Machine guns are now used by the defenders in this portion. The attacking party is said to outnumber the defenders 5 to 1.

HARBORD SENDS UNITED STATES TROOPS INTO WEST VIRGINIA

AIRPLANES HURL BOMBS DOWN ON INVADERS IN MINE WAR

Virginia, stated that he had taken the action without awaiting the proclamation of martial law and at an early hour today he was unable to say whether the President had issued the martial law proclamation.

The telegram from General H. H. Bandholtz, representative of the President, declared the armed forces were not indicating any intention to disperse and that the situation appeared to be critical, with the immediate need for troops, General Harbord said.

The two regiments of infantry should reach the disordered regions before noon, General Harbord believes. On their arrival there they are to be under the command of General Bandholtz, who will issue such orders as he may deem fit.

Whether a third regiment of infantry, now standing by at Camp Dix awaiting orders will be ordered into West Virginia today, depends upon future reports and recommendations from General Bandholtz.

At 8 o'clock this morning none of the officials of the War Department had been advised that the proclamation of martial law had been issued.

The Secretary of War was not available and his secretary stated that he was of the opinion that the proclamation would be issued later in the morning prior to the time of arrival of the troops in West Virginia.

General Bandholtz was in frequent communication with the War Department this forenoon. He reported to Secretary Weeks that Philip Murray, International Vice-President of the United Mine Workers' Union, had joined in urging upon him the recommendation for the troop movement.

Declaration of martial law was still withheld awaiting the arrival of troops, and General Bandholtz further recommended to when Secretary Weeks left the War Department for the White House to attend the regular Friday Cabinet meeting.

On reaching the White House he told the West Virginia situation only would be discussed by the Cabinet brought up by the President.

points on the twenty-five-mile front, threatened hourly to smash through the lines. The defenders, reinforced by business and professional men from every section of the State, were thrown into the lines. They returned shot for shot with the miners.

The miners sullenly rejected the President's proclamation and continued to drive additional men to the border. The Hewitts Creek concentration is the greatest in point of number of men, but at other points on the border the miners are congregating this morning.

Miners working in the Logan Field left the mines today to join the army of defence. The miners had been working practically eighty per cent. Only such coal as is necessary here will be produced.

WILD NIGHT IN LOGAN.

The workers have shouldered rifles and are being thrown into the lines to reinforce the exhausted defence army.

Casualties are known to have occurred last night and early today but because of the confusion and darkness it has been impossible to verify any of the reports.

Logan did not sleep last night. The women were up cooking for the defenders; the men were on the front or in reserve shotgunning an hour or

Miners Threaten to Smash 25-Mile Front

By International News Service.

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 2.—A night of wildest terror has passed in Logan.

The miners, swarming at many rifle pits at the court house between rellefs of the guard.

Boys of fifteen years have been pressed into service. Old men of eighty are shouldering rifles and doing their turns at guard duty in the front line positions.

Every effort is strained by the Loganites to hold the county until the arrival of the Federal troops.

An effort was made to burn and dynamite the Chesapeake & Ohio bridge over the Logan valley division at Big Creek early today. A portion of the bridge was burned and dynamite discovered by a sentinel who extinguished the fire. If the bridge had been destroyed the only railroad communicating Logan would have been cut off. It would have prevented the arrival of supplies and caused a big delay in the dispatch of the United States troops.

The official communique of Colonel W. Eubank, commander of the volunteers, this morning said:

"Heavy firing took place at Big Creek at 5.30 a. m. The enemy made a concerted attack but were thrown back.

"There was firing at Crooked Creek all night. Reinforcements were dispatched to the danger zones but miners were unable to advance.

"At Crooked Creek a detachment of fifty men defending a mountain pass was thrown back a half mile by a heavy attack of the miners just before daybreak. The detachment "dug in" after retiring and was able to hold their position against repeated attacks of the miners.

Williamson, W. Va., Sept. 2.—The first uprising in Mingo County since the battle opened along the Boone-Logan County line was reported to Sheriff Pinson today. A number of men had slipped across the Tug River from Kermit in Martin County, Ky., and recrossed into West Virginia and started in Logan through Wayne County.

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 2.—(By The Associated Press)—The situation along Blair Mountain was shrouded in mystery this morning. Colonel Jackson Arnold, commanding the State police, Sheriff Don Chafin of Logan County and Sheriff "Bad" Hatfield of McDowell County, who are directing the deputy sheriffs and volunteers along Pine Fork Ridge, refusing detailed information of events during the past 24 hours.

By International News Service.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 2.—The 40th Infantry, at Camp Knox, Ky., and the 19th Infantry, at Camp Sherman, Ohio, have been ordered to entrain immediately for West Virginia "trouble zone," it was learned today at Fort Benjamin Harrison, headquarters of the Fifth Army Corps.

SKEFFINGTON REMOVED BY HARDING

Boston Immigration Commissioner Ousted After Refusing to Resign

Washington, Sept. 2. — President Harding today signed the order removing F. J. Skeffington as commissioner of immigration at Boston. It was announced at the White House. Skeffington had refused to resign when asked. No mention has been made of the appointment of his successor.

Since July 12, when despatches from Washington announced that John G. Hagberg of Watertown, former inspector, had been selected to succeed Skeffington various rumors have been circulated to none of which would the former commissioner make reply.

He virtually admitted, however, that he had been asked to resign and intimated that he considered that his term of office still had months to run and that he would not quit before his term was up unless compelled to do so.

Skeffington was appointed by President Wilson in July, 1914, succeeding Colonel George S. Billings, who retired after more years of service. In March, 1920, Skeffington was reappointed by Wilson.

Last January he was sent by President Wilson to investigate conditions in Europe, especially as they affected immigration to the United States. He was also assigned to take charge of the deportation of nineteen Reds, whose names were mentioned as the probable successor to Skeffington, and it became known that Senator Lodge was backing the Watertown man for the post, charges of "peddling" were made by friends of Skeffington.

These were later brought to the attention of Senators, and it was announced that President Harding would not appoint Hagberg until the matter had been settled.

Hagberg was born in Sweden in 1874, and has lived in the United States for 41 years. He is an excellent linguist. His record was unblemished until the pending charges were preferred against him.

He served with the Massachusetts militia during the Spanish American war, and was a Republican member of the state House of Representatives.

TURNS BIG FARM OVER TO ARMY OF WORKERS

Millionaire A. E. Little's Employes to Have Products of Estate at Cost

A. E. Little, millionaire president of the A. E. Little Company, has opened his 1,000-acre farm at Marblehead to his 7,000 employes in Lynn and other cities to buy all food they need for the table at cost on a co-operative plan.

This action of one of the largest manufacturers of shoes in America was received with much pleasure by the workers and many of them have gone down to the great farm to look over "their property."

President Little said his farm and all it affords is God-given and his partners in business were entitled to receive some of the benefits.

VEGETABLES AT COST.

He has turned over the farm to the employes and declares that from now on it is their farm.

An elaborate scheme is being worked out to enable the workers to secure their eggs, milk, cabbage, squash, celery and other farm products at the cost of production, which in this case will eliminate the cost of the land.

One of the show places of New England, the farm has been maintained as a hobby for the millionaire shoe manufacturer. But he said the farm has grown to such large proportions and is turning out such a large quantity of foodstuff that he wants to give employes the benefit of this method of cutting down living expenses.

He has been operating the farm for several years, experimenting in breeding cattle, growing plants and even importing pigeons from Germany to raise the delectable squabs for the table. Homes are being erected for the farm help numbering some 150. When crops are to be harvested this number increases to more than 200.

BRING GOODS TO FACTORY.

The employes have had the opportunity of going to the farm and buying produce considerably under the market, but Mr. Little declared that they have not been receiving the full benefit they should have.

Commodities will be brought to the several factories of the company every day and the workers will be able to carry them home at a nominal price.

Sorosis Farm will be developed on an extensive scale, and one of the plans is to have a railroad station in front of the farm to make it more accessible to the factory help.

Employes on the farm are able to purchase their table needs at prices far below the retail price, and even under wholesale. This advantage will be passed on to the factory help on a large scale. Mr. Little is a frequent visitor at the farm to supervise the program of enlarging its scope for the factory employes.

EMPLOYES FARMERS.

Hundreds of automobiles come to the farm every day to buy foodstuff, but hereafter Mr. Little said employes of the firm will be "first" served and their prices will be far below that charged outside customers.

The farm has twenty-six horses on it, but they are for working the fields and when Edward B. Lewis, the general superintendent; W. J. Hunt, in charge of the poultry, or any of the help want to get from one end of the farm to the other, they find an automobile at their call. Sorosis Farm is operated according to twentieth-century methods.

There are 160 cows on the farm, being divided between Guernseys and Holsteins, and the cattle shed presents the appearance of a mammoth spick and span kitchen, with its cement floors, iron stalls and nickel railings.

About a hundred acres are sowed in corn and this corn is declared by farm experts to be of the best in New England. The corn grows to fifteen feet in height. All this is used on the farm for feeding the livestock.

Three thousand eggs are turned out by some seven thousand hens.

The incubating department is able to turn out more than 10,000 chickens a year.

BABY IS VICTIM OF MISGUIDED MOTHER LOVE

Doctors Force Entrance to Home of Child Severely Burned

Northampton, Sept. 2.—A pathetic tale of ignorance and misguided mother-love came out today in a report of Miss Carrie Gauthier, local agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

A week ago Lillie Borowski, three years old, was severely burned while playing with matches. The mother, Mrs. John Borowski, found the baby screaming in the yard, its clothing ablaze. She carried the child indoors after extinguishing the fire and smeared the little body with cattle manure.

Later she feared this would not be effective and allowed one of the neighbors to call a doctor. When he arrived she was found holding the baby under a cold water spout in an effort to wash off the filth.

The doctor ordered the child to the hospital but the mother protested, whereupon the doctor applied first aid remedies.

The following day he returned and encased the little suffering form in a coating of alright wax, the method of curing burns developed during the war.

After he left the mother decided this was not the thing to do, and tore off the bandages and the wax and applied an over-strong solution of sulpho naphtol, which irritated the raw flesh horribly.

Two days later the child's condition alarmed the neighbors and Miss Gauthier was notified. She was met with stubborn refusal when she asked to see the child and the door was locked in her face.

She returned with four physicians, a member of the town selectmen, Sheriff Kingsley and four constables. They broke down the door and forced the screaming mother to relinquish the child, which was taken to the hospital for treatment.

The baby is reported to be recovering, but skin grafting will be necessary before she is fully recovered. The burns run from her right shoulder to the left thigh, across the breast and abdomen.

makes any business outside of usury seem not worth while.

England has successfully tried out a giant bombing airship. It weighs 200,000 pounds. Armor plate protects it from anti-aircraft artillery. It can safely be operated without the usual small scout planes protecting it. Eight hundred and forty horse-power engines give it speed.

Such a fighting, bombing machine, costing, perhaps a quarter of a million, probably half that, might in an hour sink five hundred millions worth of battleships. "One bomb will sink any ship now afloat," Pershing says.

What is this country doing about giant, armor-plated fliers? Is all the money to be spent on out-of-date battleships because steel concerns need the money?

PEACHY, STAGE NYMPH, BEMOANS CHANGE IN CHORUS GIRLS' SHAPES

WEE SYLPH VINE TYPE THE RAGE

By WINIFRED VAN DUZEN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 2.—Peachy showed up on Broadway today while the manager who's rehearsing her gang was having his throat sprayed.

Clad in a new black crepe outfit, Peachy, who left off walkin' the weary about four weeks ago, appeared as delectable as the fluttering vine after a vacational desert.

Yet she traveled through the virgin forest of shiny new bill-boards practically incog. She raised her plaint:

"Say, ain't it awful? Like it wasn't enough that we change our style of dressing and our walk and sometimes our talk every year, but now we gotta switch figures.

A 1921 MODEL.

"How do you like mine, dear? Nineteen-twenty-one model, the clinging sylph, weight a hundred and ten ringside, just like they said, Gen. I'm lucky I wasn't born with red hair. Blondes it is, says Bill, and blonde I stay. Well, so-long, dearie, don't forget to look for me in the second row. I'm real sweet, if I do say it!"

Which tells the horrible truth.

Styled in girls have changed. The season's featured offering, designed to meet popular demand, is a fragile bit, tinted and textured like Dresden, with shepherdess mannerisms and sophisticated feet.

CENTURY SPECIFICATIONS.

At the Century, where two of the largest and most carefully picked choruses now in rehearsal are being put through their antics, these are the specifications by which the year's chorus girl is measured:

Weight—110 to 115 pounds.
Height—Five feet.
Hair—Ash blonde to light brown.
Eyes—Blue.
Feet—Medium size four.

At the Winter Garden it was proclaimed by a worried looking press agent that no mathematical list of measurements governs the person of the chorus.

He di' state, however, that a bunch of forget-me-nots, a saucer of sliced peaches, and a bit of ivy vine, are items of importance back stage. And if such of Peachy's friends who come job hunting resemble her, they're hired.

Eleanor Painter, who will continue to star in the "Last Waltz" at the Century, said that the craze for realism on the stage is back of the new, thirty-girl effects. Realism has something to do with it too, she maintained and continued:

"The statuesque beauty was the stage favorite in the day when it was fashionable for women to pretend they needed constant protection from the great, rough world.

FLUFFY BLONDES THE RAGE.

"The business man, who usually was glad he tired husband, went to the theatre for change of scenery.

"Same thing happening now, turned round. Athletics have developed American women; political and other outside interests have destroyed their ability to do the tendril impersonation well. And our gentlemen friends in their souls, hunger for that sturdy oak feeling that comes from clinging femininity."

The seasonal fashion in chorus girls means that New York is overrun with little, fluffy blondes.

LANDIS TOO BUSY TO ANSWER BAR ATTACK

Chicago, Sept. 2.— Judge Kenesaw M. Landis announced when he reached his office today that he was too busy on other matters to consider a reply to the resolution of the American Bar Association at Cincinnati, yesterday, criticising him for holding a Federal office and his position as baseball Commissioner at the same time.

"I haven't given it a thought," Judge Landis said. "I am too busy on other matters this morning, but may take it up later in the day."

Salem, Sept. 2.—More than twice as many women are suing for divorce than men in what is said to be the largest number of divorce suits ever filed in the history of the local court. Forty-one dissatisfied wives are attempting to undo their marriage bonds, while only seventeen men are dissatisfied enough with married life to seek a divorce.

NO MAN'S SLAVE AGAIN, SAYS PEGGY JOYCE

Puts Emphatic Denial on Report She Is to Wed Merillon, Parisian Millionaire

Paris, Sept. 2.—"Marry? I would rather go to a convent for life than again become the slave of some man's selfishness."

With these words to one of her intimate friends, Peggy Hopkins Joyce flatly denied that she favors Merillon, Parisian millionaire, as the next applicant for her hand in marriage.

Merillon meanwhile is smiling and saying nothing, content with Peggy's acceptance of an invitation to his house party at his Pau Chateau for the next fortnight.

According to her intimates Peggy has become a regular man hater. She declares that she is absolutely fed up on wedded life and hopes only for the day when she will retrieve her independence.

Elsie Ferguson, who sails for America Saturday on the Aquitania, is somewhat of the same mind as Peggy on the marriage question. She declared:

"Believe me, the marriage bond is no joke. It makes life a regular prison for any woman loving liberty and her career.

"No woman in my profession should marry. Why, I have only spent two weeks with my husband in five and a half months. He is a perfect dear but he will agree that it was a mistake to marry me.

GIRL ACCUSER OF POLICEMAN DROPS CASE

Decides Not to Press Attack Charge Against Roxbury Officer

Miss Olga Rathgeb of No. 21 Edge Hill street, Jamaica Plain, who alleged that Patrolman Ostha H. Beauregard of Roxbury Crossing police station attacked her on Parker Hill, today said she would not press the charge against the policeman.

After making the statement, she failed to appear at Roxbury court, although the accused patrolman and his superior, Captain Jeremiah Galivan, remained about the courthouse until the sessions were ended.

According to the story told by the girl, Patrolman Beauregard drove her fiance away and then forced her to accompany him to the place where the alleged attack occurred.

Captain Galivan said police action depends on the swearing out by the girl of a warrant against the patrolman. Court officials say no hearing of any kind can be had until such a warrant has been taken out.

Despite the alleged happening, the girl's fiance, John Kirssopoulos, a partially disabled veteran of the World War, says he will carry out his intention of marrying the girl next Wednesday.

According to the girl's story she walked to Parker Hill Hospital last Monday night, where her sweetheart had been a patient after his return from France, and the couple sat on the cement steps to the hospital talking over their wedding plans.

SHOWED MARRIAGE PAPER.

It is alleged that the accused policeman approached and remarked that it was "a nice evening." The girl says no reply was made to the patrolman's salutation, whereupon he demanded to know if they were aware they were sitting on government grounds and inquired what they were doing on the premises after 10 o'clock at night.

Miss Rathgeb, who is twenty-five years old, says her fiance told the policeman they were talking over their wedding plans and produced a marriage certificate, after which he obtained a few days previously to prove his statement. The girl says the patrolman snatched at the sweetheart's statement and drawing something from his pocket pointed it at the war veteran and ordered him to go to his home at No. 65 Centre street.

IDENTIFIED ACCUSED.

It is charged that the war veteran obeyed the policeman's command and that the patrolman detained the girl when she tried to follow her sweetheart. The girl says Beauregard seized her by the wrists and despite her protests led her to a field near the hospital and attacked her.

Following the attack, the girl says the policeman walked with her to Day street. She continued home alone, finding her fiance at the house waiting for her. After he had heard what had happened, the couple immediately went to the Roxbury Crossing police station where the girl says, she identified the accused officer from among a number of patrolmen on duty.

Beauregard, who was married two years ago and has one child, denies he is guilty and insists he never saw the girl who accuses him. He is still on duty.

'Don't Work If Home Needs You,' Say Married Women Who Hold Jobs

But Conditions Often Entitle Wife to Compete in Professions or Industry With Unmarried Sister, They Assert.

By HAZEL CANNING

"Women whose husbands earn a good living should do no work outside their own homes. By working, when they do not need to, they are taking the bread from their single sisters."

This is the statement of Mrs. Samuel Gompers, new wife of the veteran labor leader, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. Mrs. Gompers so expressed herself recently, in an interview at Atlantic City. The opinion of the lady meets with wavering agreement and disagreement among married women who work in Boston.

"It all depends." Mrs. Grace Peterson, saleswoman in a Boston department store, qualified, "perhaps the ordinary woman, whose husband earns a good living, should not work.

"But certainly the world would lose what it could not afford to get along without, if the married professional woman should give up her work, just because her husband was able to support her."

"Ah, yes," partially agreed Mrs. Martha Freed, Boston telephone operator, who, incidentally, still works, though married. "This is my idea of the married woman and the job. Let her work, if she hasn't any home. Let her work, if she hasn't any children. Otherwise, let her stay at home."

UP TO INDIVIDUAL.

Mrs. Martha White, a third married woman who works, shades her opinion still differently.

"The matter is entirely up to the individual to decide," said she. "The world cares not for the matrimonial status of the woman. What the world cares for is the work."

So opinions run. Each lady elaborates her views. As Mrs. Peterson, whose sales, in the department store where she works, far exceed most of her unmarried competitors, remarks:

"This is the way I figure the married woman should work proposition. If two women, engaged in industry, or some other form of non-creative work, each need a position, and each are equally fit for the work, there should be no discrimination between them. If, on the other hand, both are equal, and the husband of one is able to support her, the work should then certainly go to the unmarried woman. This, for ordinary work."

WOMEN IN ARTS.

"But take women in the professions; take women in the arts. What a shame it would be, if marriage stopped the work of such women. Think of the loss to the world, if the great women of the past, and the great women of the present, should give up their work outside their homes, just because they had a husband able to support them. A woman doctor, for instance, should just be coming into her ripened experience, when it was time for her to shut the doors of her home, by Mrs. Gompers' advice, upon her work forever. The loss to the world in trained women, would be very great indeed. I cannot believe that such waste should be tolerated in a world which needs to be thrifty."

To which Mrs. Martha Freed, as she plugged the spaces of her telephone switchboard, rejoined. "Certainly," said she. "The woman with a home to keep, should stay at home. For home and children, to my way of thinking, should serve as the matter for the married woman rather than taking a living from her unmarried sister by working when her husband could support her. Certainly, it is old as the hills and as old as truth, that the child needs its mother, all day, at home.

MOTHER NEEDED AT HOME.

"It matters not what fine career goes begging, while the mother stays at home, washing little faces, relieving little distresses, bringing up little citizens to go out in the world, by and by, well taught, well nourished, well launched in life by their own mothers.

"No hired nurse or housekeeper can take the place of mother in the home. The high duty of motherhood transcends all work, however interesting. It surely is better for a woman to bring up sons, who shall achieve careers themselves, than to spend her life selfishly on the lone career—her own—while the real work at home is being neglected."

Mrs. Grace Peterson, saleswoman, who says if a single and a married woman are competitors for a job for which they are equally fitted and the wife has a husband able to support her, the place should go to the unmarried one.

Snipers Kill Belfast Boy; Death Toll 18

Belfast, Sept. 2.—(By the Associated Press).—James Johnson, aged fifteen, died at a hospital here this morning from wounds received during street fighting here. His death, with that of Walter Campbell, who died last night, brings the death roll of the disorders in Belfast since Monday up to eighteen.

Johnson and Campbell were members of a group of five boys who climbed a wall to watch the shooting. They there became targets of snipers, one of their companions being killed instantly.

There was a curious case of misplaced identity in connection with young Johnson. While he was lying unconscious in the hospital, three different families claimed him as a member. One man was so sure the patient was his son that he took Johnson's clothes home with him, only to find his own boy seated by the fireside.

There were several cases of assault in the Falls District of the city this morning, men going to work being attacked. The police, otherwise, reported the city quiet.

The fund committee and the Boston American wish publicly to thank the management of the local sightseeing buses for their generosity in loaning a bus and driver Monday night to convey the girls who made a collection at the Arena A. C.

A volunteer chauffeur was called for. All the men were tired, but Frederick Colby Whipp stepped at the chance. He said he was glad to be of any service to the cause. He made a hit with everybody. He was willing and helpful and had to stay out until after 1 a. m., but he never grumbled. In the course of the evening members of the committee learned by chance that Chauffeur Whipp served in the 101st Boston police force. He has the mental and physical qualifications. The committee also wishes to thank again the management of the local agencies of the Locomobile, Winton, Lincoln, Stearns, Hudson and Peerless for providing automobiles, which greatly facilitated the committee work.

A collection was taken up for the fund by girl ushers at Codman Square Theatre last night and "Stonewall" Jackson auctioned off a baseball autographed by Mayor Peters and "Rabbit" Maranville.

There is sentiment back of the ball game to be played this evening on Franklin Field between the Hooper A. C.'s and "Bill" Stewarts of Jamaica Plain All-Stars in aid of the Boston American Cuneo Fund.

Patrolman Cuneo, when attached to the Joy Street Station, had a beat that embraced Beacon Hill, and the boys on the Hooper A. C. nine knew and liked him. That was why they challenged any last semi-pro team to swell the fund and, through the good graces of "Stonewall" Jackson, the game will be staged at 6 p. m. HANOVER TRUST DEPOSITS ARE REVEALED

Allen Tells What He Found on Opening Boxes at Closed Bank

The contents of several safety deposit boxes in the Hanover Trust Company, which were opened on August 25 by Bank Commissioner Allen, under authority of the Supreme Court, have been made public in a report filed in the clerk's office of the Supreme Court by Fitz-Henry Smith, Jr., liquidating agent of the Hanover Trust Company.

In a box standing in the name of John S. Dondero of Medford, who was associated with Charles Ponzi, was found a large manila envelope, on the outside of which appeared the figures "$6,000," a lot of Italian government bonds and notes and other papers.

Several of the boxes had nothing in them. One had papers belonging to the Standard Trucking & Transfer Company.

Mr. Allen several weeks ago obtained permission to sell for not less than $1,122 the "rent" of boxes, and all but six holders came forward on notice and surrendered their keys. The contents of these six boxes Mr. Allen has placed under seal and will hold them for their rightful owners.

HERRICK A TYPE OF CONGRESS CRANKS

There Are Others Besides the 'Apollo of House,' Says Hapgood, Including Woman

By NORMAN HAPGOOD
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Now that August is over there may be a lessening of a certain type of news in this district. A resident of Washington, returning to town, asked me what was arousing the most interest in the city.

"The Herrick case," I answered.

As he had not heard of it I had to explain. It had nothing to do with foreign affairs, or taxation, or railroads, or the relief of farmers. It concerned the attempt of a lone statesman from Oklahoma to become acquainted with the prettiest girls in the district.

NOT SURPRISING TYPE.

Perhaps he has been looking too much at magazine covers, at any rate I described to my friend the vagaries of the Oklahoma Congressman, his form letter to the entrants in a beauty contest and his assurance to them that if they would compete for his hand and heart they would be competing for the greatest prize in any woman's life. The love of one of the very few pure men extant, with plenty of money and with the practical certainty of being President in 1929.

My friend, who has lived in Washington a long time, did not seem startled. "Does not that seem strange to you," I asked, "to find such a man occupying a seat in the House of Representatives?"

"No," he replied. "It is what I should expect. What type do you expect to find?"

The average intelligence of the House seems to me fairly, although not astoundingly high. It is a large body and it always includes a few cranks.

CRANKS AND BEAUTY.

This particular crank told the girls that his face was only about 75 per cent. perfect, but that the rest of his pulchritude averaged up around 90. Of course a man may be entirely sane and yet disagree with others about his beauty.

In fact, another statesman, discussing this particular illustration of Mr. Herrick about his looks, told me the tale of Mrs. Huggins on her first visit to the Apollo Belvedere. She gave the statue a long examination.

"Well," she observed, at the end of her study, "it that is the Apollo Belvedere, give me Huggins."

Rumor has it that Mr. Herrick is afflicted with a definite lunacy, and that his election was the result of the death of his antagonist at a moment in the campaign so late that no substitute was named.

THE ANTI-CIGARETTE BUG.

Although he readily holds first place this Summer in the convictions of the House, he is not the only one. Number two is the gentleman who is determined to stop the use of tobacco by all the female residents of the District of Columbia. He would have a better chance if he started in some State Legislature of the Middle West. This cosmopolitan region takes his appeal but lightly.

Down Boston, which I believe has some legal discrimination against ladies in matters of the weed, has her difficulties. At her famous tennis courts of Longwood, Mrs. Molla Bjurstead Mallory, when not playing herself, sits in the grand stand and calmly puffs away.

But the biggest task of all during these hot Summer days, has been undertaken by the only woman member of the House. Miss Robertson imbibed the conception that, by virtue of her position, she represented all the women in this fair land. The idea has made her a lot of trouble.

MISS ROBERTSON'S VAGARIES.

In connection with the disarmament conference Miss Robertson started out to hold the position that no woman in the country was fit to sit at it. Later she made an exception in favor of the mother of Senator Hale. It is not easy to say just why that conclusion has the perfect comic touch; but it is agreed hereabouts that probably Mrs. Hale is not the only woman in the United States who struggles in life have fitted her for severe and modern thinking.

One of Miss Robertson's specialties can scarcely be laughed at. The standpatters have made a monkey of her in regard to the maternity bill. She has a fixed idea, or mania, that that bill, backed by the most experienced and disinterested of women, is a malign device for interfering with nature and decency in the entrance of the young to this vale of tears.

It is a pitiable idea, but beyond the reach of explanation. And in this one respect the belief on Miss Robertson's part that she has on her own delicate shoulders the task of representing the interest of fifty-five million females becomes something worse than funny.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS OF GREATER BOSTON

Community Players at Manchester Tonight

Society girl was enthusiastic spectator at Myopia polo.

MATILDA HOUGHTON

Miss Matilda Houghton of South Dartmouth, Mass., was among the spectators at the recent polo matches held at the Myopia Hunt Club, Hamilton. These matches always draw a large crowd of visitors to the North Shore.

By BETTY ALDEN

Much interest among members of the North Shore Summer colony is being manifested in the group of plays which the Community Players from the "Playhouse-on-the-Moors," East Gloucester, will present this evening at Horticultural Hall, Manchester. This troupe of amateur players has become so well known along the Shore that society folk go not a little out of their way to attend the performances which they give. Among the actors are the sculptor, Cyrus Dallin, who is staying at Pride's Crossing for the occasion, and John S. Sargent, who is the house guest of John Hays Hammond, Jr., at Gloucester.

A number of prominent society women comprise the committee for this evening's performance, which is being held for the benefit of the Beverly Hospital. The list includes Mrs. Henry C. Clarke, Pride's Crossing; Miss Anna Agassiz, Hamilton; Mrs. Charles G. Walker, Manchester; Mrs. George W. Woodbury, Gloucester; Miss Grace Nichols, Chestnut street, and Miss Louisa O. Loring of Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., of Hamilton, are giving a luncheon at 1 o'clock today, following the whippet races at Myopia, and preceding the dog show at the Tuckerman place. There will be covers for forty, the guests including the members of the Eastern Dog Club.

Harvard, '21, classmates of George S. Soper, Jr., of New York, will be interested to learn of his engagement to Miss Carmen Machado Whitman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred A. Whitman, also of New York. Mr. Soper, who served in the United States Navy air force during the war, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Soper of No. 120 West Fifty-seventh street. His fiancee was one of last year's debutantes and is a member of the Junior League.

The "mattress" race has proved such a tremendously popular aquatic sport at exclusive Bailey's Beach, Newport, that a similar race takes place at the beach tomorrow. This particular contest is quite unique in its requirements for the entries—they must weigh 250 pounds together and their ages must total forty-five. The race will be a triangular affair, and Mrs. Eugene Reynal is offering prizes for the winners. That Bailey's Beach is the very last word in exclusiveness is fortunate for the contestants, as the "mattress" event makes for anything but dignity for society folk riding the waves of the briny deep aloft a treacherously-rolling mattress.

The Horse Show on Labor Day at the Myopia Hunt Club, Hamilton, will be held on the practice polo field at 10 a. m. and 2.30 p. m. At this twenty-fifth horse show of the club Quimby's Military Band is to enliven the scene with its music.

Colonel and Mrs. E. M. House are expected to arrive today at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph F. Tucker, "Coolidge Farmhouse," Coolidge Point, on the North Shore, where they will spend several weeks. Upon their arrival in Quebec, Canada, from a trip abroad, Mr. and Mrs. House were met by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, the latter a daughter from Long Island, who motored up to meet them.

George C. Butler of Boston is registered at the Lafayette Hotel, Washington, D. C.

Several mothers clad in black and wearing gold stars were among those who went to the South station today to claim the bodies of heroes who died in France.

Twenty-six flag-draped coffins arrived in Boston today from Hoboken, New Jersey. They were placed in line in the old baggage room near track 28. As fast as the relatives of the dead soldiers had proved their identity the coffins were carried away in hearses and ambulances.

A squad of men in charge of Corporal Patrick J. Canavan of the 8th Infantry guarded the bodies on their way from Hoboken to Boston and superintended their distribution.

SOVIET SCHOOLS DEFENDED AS AID TO POOR

Called Adaptation of System Used by Upper Classes in England

By LOUISE BRYANT

Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service.

Before I went to Russia I had heard of the children's colonies established by the Soviets all over Russia, and I had also heard that the idea that lay back of these schools was to smash family life. The first prominent educator I questioned gave me this explanation.

"In the first place," he said, "this regime inherited from former governments the burden and the responsibility of hundreds of thousands of orphans. We had to put them in homes and we did not believe in isolating them just because they were orphans.

"We were also faced by the fact that the majority of poor families were so steeped in ignorance that it was really a blessing to the children to take them out of their own homes during school terms. There was only one way for the children of inferior parents to have the same chance as the children of superior ones and that was to send the children to boarding schools."

He stopped and thought. Then he remarked:

"And the only reason it seems wild and unsocial to establish boarding schools is because everything in Russia is considered wild and unsocial. In England the wealthy families for generations have sent their children to boarding schools."

I spent today at a model boarding school in Moscow. They were using the most modern methods of education, Montessori and Froebel. There were about 200 youngsters, boys and girls ranging from six to fourteen years. The children escorted me over the building and proudly exhibited the departments. Everything was clean although threadbare. I saw all the class rooms, laboratories and dormitories and a splendid little exhibition of colored drawings. Of the drawings I came away with a precious handful signed and presented by the small artists themselves.

I had lunch with the children in the big dining hall. What a good natured, jolly company! They insisted on giving me sugar and butter as a special sign of attention.

The nicest part of the day was spent watching a class of about thirty girls dancing simple ballet dances. Some showed exceptional talent. I asked the instructor what sort of children made up the class, and she gave me the antecedents of the six I considered the best dancers. One was the daughter of a late general, one of a small noble, and the other four were children of peasants and factory workers.

CONNOLLY TELLS OF HIS INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL MACREADY

TORTURED IRELAND

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY,
Famous New England Author and Journalist.

On my return from my first trip South I got word from Mr. Frahee, our American Relief head over there, that General Macready had passed the word he would like to have a talk with me.

So I went up Dublin Castle way and after passing the guards within and without the gate, and being escorted to the General's quarters by an armed soldier, and there scrutinized by a valet and an aide-de-camp, I was ushered into the General's presence.

An English journalist stopping at my hotel had told me Macready was a wonderfully well-read man, particularly well up on history. I already had the word of a pretty good Irish historian who had met Macready that he knew very little of Irish history. The Cromwellian massacres at least he had never heard of.

My own experience with Macready is that he may be a reader of history, but he is not a student of history. His mind seemed full enough of facts, but he seemed to draw no deductions from his facts, at least, no deductions damaging to the prestige of the beneficent Empire.

NEVER SETTLED BY FORCE.

Our American Consul in Dublin, a man strong for anything with the Dublin Castle rubber stamp on it, had told me that Macready was a great soldier, which he may or may not be.

On first taking command of the British forces in Ireland he had said "From 100 to 150 gunmen are causing all this trouble here. I will clean them up and the trouble will be over in Ireland."

And on this afternoon to me, after seven months as commander-in-chief of the British forces in Ireland, he freely admitted to me that "physical force would never settle the Irish question."

He may be a good military man who does not understand the Irish people. "I am of Irish blood, too," he said to me. And so he is. He is the grandson of Macready, the famous tragedian, but his people are of the North of Ireland Irish, and they half the time are more English than any English people at home.

Macready was as easy as an old shoe to talk to, though there were times when I felt like saying to him: "Do you suppose your English will ever get to where you will apply to your own work the moral gauge which you force upon others?"

The name of General Michael Collins of the I. R. A. was brought up, Macready, however, always carefully omitting the title.

"Now, there is Michael Collins," he said. "I have no doubt he is a decent sort of fellow in his everyday life. I do not think for one moment that he would take pleasure in shooting down a man in cold blood. And yet in England his name is regarded as anathema."

Which caused me to say: "The important thing to Collins is, probably, how his name is regarded in Ireland."

"But many people regard him as an arch murderer."

"Do you know, general, that I have talked with many people who regard you as an arch-murderer?"

He almost sat up straight. "Oh, I dessay, I dessay," he said hastily.

"It is wonderful how Collins gets to have an independent Ireland on the streets of Dublin," he said by and by. I wondered how much he knew about Collins going about the streets of Dublin.

MILITARY REASONS.

I wondered if he knew—but he must have known it from his secret service—that there were policemen in Dublin who knew Collins, scores of them, and how it was that Collins often walked or bicycled safely through Dublin's streets notwithstanding that there was a reward of 40,000 pounds sterling on his head.

Talking of Ireland's prospects he hinted that Ireland would probably be offered some measure of self government. "But complete independence is out of the question," he hastened to tack on. "For military reasons alone England cannot afford to have an independent Ireland on her flank." Which jarred me into saying:

"Then to carry your argument to its logical conclusion, General, you mean that France makes a mistake in allowing Belgium to have a separate government?"

"And Germany made a mistake in ever allowing Holland to exist as a separate government—in both cases a greater mistake than England would make by allowing Ireland free government, because in both those two continental countries the little peoples are more nearly allied racially and religiously with the two little countries than England is with Ireland, not to speak of the fact that Nature has also marked an incredible line, the Irish Sea, between England and Ireland."

STRONG ON PROPAGANDA.

"Mr. Connolly, let us not talk politics," he said testily.

I half grinned at him, saying to myself, "You old fox, who started it?"

He had a way of opening up a vein of conversation and gradually leading it to where in the most incidental and casual way in the world he would slip into a little propaganda. If that first little injection seemed to be taking he would try to slip a little more in, and so on.

The bureaucratic type of Englishmen who are legion, are forever doing that sort of thing. The English are natural propagandists, perhaps the best in the world; their educated classes are more generally given to it than any other in the world. The propaganda is necessary to the life of England.

Most of us know today that when English propaganda ceases to be effective, England is gone. I mean England and not the empire. The empire is already gone.

I was alone for almost an hour and a half with Macready, smoked and had tea with him, and spoke my mind to him more than once. He is an old fox, more of a politician than a soldier.

QUIT IN SIX WEEKS.

Two days before I saw Macready he had said to Clement France, our American relief head in Dublin, "If we cannot end this thing in six weeks of more intensive warfare, we might as well throw up our hands in Ireland."

Now take note that that statement was made by the commander-in-chief of the British forces in Ireland, the same who seven months before had said that 100 or 150 gunmen in Ireland had only to be cleaned up to settle the Irish question; and note further that the six weeks of intensive warfare were up just about the time that Lloyd George called for the peace conference with DeValera.

I liked Macready. He was without a bit of pomp; there was not a touch of the military automaton to him. A very human man, and yet one who illustrated once more the evils of that training which induces a man finally to look upon other human beings as merely so many units to be expended when war comes.

I liked him, but I can never forget that after the terrible sack of Balbriggan, with its arson and its murders of innocent Irish people by the Black and Tans, Macready is quoted in the press as saying: "We must make allowance for the evils of human nature."

MACREADY REFUSES TO SEE ERIN LIKE BELGIUM

Talking of Ireland's prospects he said: "Complete independence is out of the question. For military reasons alone England cannot afford to have an independent Ireland on her flank." Which jarred me into saying:

"Then to carry your argument to its logical conclusion, General, you mean that France makes a mistake in allowing Belgium to have a separate government?

"And Germany made a mistake in ever allowing Holland to exist as a separate government—in both cases a greater mistake than England would make by allowing Ireland free government!"

"Mr. Connolly, let us not talk politics," he said testily.

PARIS LIFE BASIS OF DIVORCE FOR NEW YORK GIRL

Mrs. Ernest Wiltze Wins Decree; Report They Disagreed on Gay Functions

Paris, Sept. 2.—Alleging incompatibility of temperament Mrs. Ernest Wiltze, nee Emily Stuart Taylor of New York, obtained a divorce here. Her husband is the well-known mining engineer, who has been prominent in New York and Paris society.

The alimony terms have not been made public but it is understood that Mrs. Wiltze retains possession of the Paris residence in the Rue Spontini.

Wiltze, when pressed for a statement, refused to make one, but it is reported that his wife disliked the gay social life of Paris, while her husband was seldom absent from functions of this sort. The basis of discontent, it is said, resulted in an amicable decision to agree to part.

SUNBURNED EYELASHES DYED WHILE YOU WAIT

New York, Sept. 2.—Getting sunburned eyelashes dyed dark while you wait is the latest trick of Brooklyn girls. A beauty parlor near Borough Hall, which does the job in 15 minutes for 50 cents, is doing a sure fire business "giving settings to the eyes."

The proprietress, whose method is to drop a white and then an amber fluid on the sun-bleached lashes, declared Egyptians had used the system and that the French had followed it.

And, it was hinted, certain men also ruled by vanity, dropped into the shop to have their lashes ravarnished.

Coventry, R. I., Sept. 2.—The "Narrow Lane" cranberry meadows, where from 5,000 to 6,000 barrels are gathered every year, are short 4,000 barrels this year.

CONNOLLY TELLS OF HIS INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL MACREADY

TORTURED IRELAND

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY,
Famous New England Author and Journalist.

On my return from my first trip South I got word from Mr. Frahce, our American Relief head over there, that General Macready had passed the word he would like to have a talk with me.

So I went up Dublin Castle way and after passing the guards with and without the gate, and being escorted to the General's quarters by an armed soldier, and there scrutinized by a valet and an aide-de-camp, I was ushered into the General's presence.

An English journalist, stopping at my hotel had told me Macready was a wonderfully well-read man, particularly well up on history. I already had the word of a pretty good Irish historian who had met Macready that he knew very little of Irish history. The Cromwellian massacres at least he had never heard of.

My own experience with Macready is that he may be a reader of history, but he is not a student of history. His mind seemed full enough of facts, but he seemed to draw no deductions from his facts, at least, no deductions damaging to the prestige of the beneficent Empire.

NEVER SETTLED BY FORCE.

Our American Consul in Dublin, a man strong for anything with the Dublin Castle rubber stamp on it, had told me that Macready was a great soldier, which he may or may not be.

On first taking command of the British forces in Ireland he had said "From 100 to 150 gunmen are causing all this trouble here. I will clean them up and the trouble will be over in Ireland."

And on this afternoon to me, after seven months as commander-in-chief of the British forces in Ireland, he freely admitted to me that "physical force would never settle the Irish question."

He may be a good military man who does not understand the Irish people. "I am of Irish blood, too," he said to me. And so he is. He is the grandson of Macready, the famous tragedian, but his people are of the North of Ireland Irish, and they half the time are more English than any English people at home.

Macready was as easy as an old shoe to talk to, though there were times when I felt like saying to him: "Do you suppose your English will ever get to where you will apply to your own work the moral gauge which you force upon others?"

The name of General Michael Collins of the I. R. A. was brought up, Macready, however, always carefully omitting the title.

"Now, there is Michael Collins," he said. "I have no doubt he is a decent sort of fellow in his everyday life. I do not think for one moment that he would take pleasure in shooting down a man in cold blood. And yet in England his name is regarded as anathema."

Which caused me to say: "The important thing to Collins is, probably, how his name is regarded in Ireland."

"But many people regard him as an arch murderer."

"Do you know, general, that I have talked with many people who regard you as an arch-murderer?"

He almost sat up straight. "Oh, I dessay, I dessay," he said hastily.

"It is wonderful how Collins gets about the streets of Dublin," he said by and by. I wondered how much he knew about Collins going about the streets of Dublin.

MILITARY REASONS.

I wondered if he knew—but he must have known it from his secret service—that there were policemen in Dublin who knew Collins, scores of them, and how it was that Collins often walked or bicycled safely through Dublin's streets notwithstanding that there was a reward of 40,000 pounds sterling on his head.

Talking of Ireland's prospects he hinted that Ireland would probably be offered some measure of self government. "But complete independence is out of the question," he hastened to tack on. "For military reasons alone England cannot afford to have an independent Ireland on her flank." Which jarred me into saying:

"Then to carry your argument to its logical conclusion, General, you mean that France makes a mistake in allowing Belgium to have a separate government?

"And Germany made a mistake in ever allowing Holland to exist as a separate government—in both cases a greater mistake than England would make by allowing Ireland free government."

"Mr. Connolly, let us not talk politics," he said testily.

—From James B. Connolly's interview with General Macready.

SOCIETY WOMAN HELPS LEDOUX AID JOBLESS

Her Identity Kept Secret; 156 in Howard Street Line for Food

A mysterious Back Bay society woman, whose name is being kept in profound secrecy, has come to the assistance of Urbain Ledoux, founder of the Home for Jobless Men at No. 21 Howard street, and has distributed hundreds of good quality cigarettes to the "down and outers" there.

Efforts to learn the name of this latest recruit to the ranks of the Ledoux corps of helpers ran into a stone wall of silence today. Ralph Jones, Ledoux's chief aide, merely smiled when asked her name, and shook his head when pressed.

"The men got the cigarettes when they needed," he said. "That's all any one need to know."

LINE TODAY LONGER.

The line, which for days has formed in front of the Home early in the morning, was longer today when time came for breakfast. There were 156 hungry men waiting when Jones appeared and the march began to a lunchroom in Stoddard place, where the meal was served. There was beef stew, baked beans, bread and butter and hot coffee for all who had tickets.

That important function attended to, the procession reformed and went back to the Home, where the work of administering shaves and haircuts to "the boys" was resumed.

Ledoux has been unable to get the shower baths he plans installed as yet, but five former barbers have been found among the Ledoux phalanx and are plying their old trade.

Adding them were four husky volunteers who acted as latherers, slapping suds from big buckets of steaming hot water and hopest to goodness shaving soap where they would do the most good. The shaved men were then shorn, the barbers doing a neat if hurried job.

HOME OPENS SUNDAY.

Preparations for opening the Home formally on Sunday morning are being rushed today. The lower rooms have been scrubbed and painted and the upper rooms are receiving their bath and renovation.

Ledoux expects to have 170 beds and mattresses in place when 8:30 Sunday morning comes round.

He is also devoting much of his time to getting work for the jobless. Twelve already have been provided for.

7-FOOT ACTOR IS STAR OF "MECCA"

Lionel Braham Made First Hit Here as Giant in 'Androcles and the Lion'

Lionel Braham, the only seven-foot actor in the world, the giant whose Caliban in the Harvard Stadium several seasons ago was the bright feature of that ill-starred spectacle, comes back to Boston September 12 as the leading character of "Mecca."

The role he plays was written by Oscar Aasche, the celebrated English actor, and author both of "Chu Chin Chow" and "Mecca" for himself. As Braham is nearly two feet taller than Aasche, the British actor says he will have to go some to make as big an impression when he plays the role in England.

Braham first came to notice in this country when he appeared in Granville Barker's company in "Androcles and the Lion," in which he played the polite giant converted to Christianity. Such a remarkable personality could not escape Morris Gest and he used him in "The Wanderer" and "Chu Chin Chow."

MATZENAUER IS WEDDED TO CHAUFFEUR

Operatic Star's Latest Romance Follows 17-Mile Scenic Drive at Carlsbad

New York, Sept. 2.—Music lovers learned to their astonishment that the latest husband of Margarete Matzenauer, the Metropolitan mezzo-soprano, is a professional chauffeur. The couple were married in Carlsbad, Germany, on June 18 last. Cable dispatches at the time stated that the bridegroom was Floyd Glotzbach, "an American business man."

Inquiry among the singer's friends revealed no knowledge of any person of that name. The bride in letters gave no additional information.

The first information regarding Glotzbach came from Del Monte, Cal., in this dispatch:

"Credit another romance for romantic Del Monte. In May Mme. Margarete Matzenauer visited the hotel for a week. She took in the seventeen-mile scenic drive and the other points of interest. Floyd Glotzbach, a Monterey young man, employed in the garage for some time, was the driver. On June 18 Floyd Glotzbach led the diva to the altar in Carlsbad."

Fresh From Paris

PARIS, France

NO matter how conservative a woman may be in her choice of daytime gowns, she does like to include at least one evening costume that is different. Paris wisely realizes this and suggests a short plaited skirt of scarlet chiffon, draped with the floor length pointed panels. With this skirt is worn a long-fitted corselet of scarlet velvet, dotted with silver spangles. The striking color of the gown and the curiously shaped corselet are very gypsylike in suggestion, but must not be taken to presage a Romany Rye period, even for evening.

THERE is a simple dignity that is most effective in the severe lines of a dinner gown of black chiffon embroidered with silver. The skirt is cut in one. A bit of silver tissue fills in the long V opening of the bodice and the girdle and long-tasseled sash ends are also of the shimmering tissue. The tassels and slides on the girdle are of jet.

U. S. KITCHEN IN PETROGRAD FOR CHILDREN

Relief Party to Open Another Kitchen Soon in Moscow

By Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The first kitchen for the feeding of children was established in Petrograd today by the American Relief Administration. Walter L. Brown, European director of the administration, said in making this announcement that another kitchen would be opened in Moscow in a few days, and that two administration steamers had arrived in Petrograd with cargoes of food.

The American Relief Administration representatives left Moscow today for the Volga region. They were John Gregg of Portland, Oregon, and William Shaffroth, of Denver, Colorado. Mr. Brown received a telegram this morning from Gregg and Shaffroth saying the Soviet government had turned over excellent offices to the administration in Moscow, and had placed a warehouse having a capacity of 10,000 tons at its disposal.

The telegram said that M. Kamenoff, head of the Russian famine relief, had been appointed liaison officer between the administration and the Soviet government.

SHACKLETON TO START SOON FOR ANTARCTIC

Attentions on Quest Delay Departure on Adventurous Cruise

(By Associated Press)

London, Sept. 2.—Sir Ernest Shackleton's expedition, which will explore land areas of the Antarctic Continent south of Africa during the coming two years, will leave about September 15, it is expected.

The steamship Quest, upon which the explorers will make their adventurous voyage, was found to give inadequate accommodations for the increased personnel found necessary after the program to be followed was increased. The alterations made in the ship have delayed the work of fitting out the expedition.

The British Admiralty has indicated certain lines of research it has desired carried out, while the British Air Ministry also has expressed a wish for experiments which are expected to have an important bearing upon the future of aviation.

Sir Ernest has declared that these researches will not curtail the original program of exploration he had in mind.

It is the desire of those financing the expedition that the Quest carry representatives from each of the British self-governing dominions. When Sir Ernest starts from Cape Town it is expected that the party will number sixteen.

Duchess Waives All Further Claim in Shonts Will

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—The will of Theodore P. Shonts, who died in 1919, leaving most of his estate to his friend, Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas, was admitted to probate in Chicago today, after the filing of the appearance of the Duchess de Chaulnes, a daughter.

It was necessary to file in Chicago a copy of the will, which was originally probated in New York, because $100,000 worth of real estate mentioned in the will is located in Cook county.

The appearance of the Duchess De Chaulnes was sent from Bideford, England, and the signing was witnessed by Helena, the Duchess of Manchester. In the appearance, the Duchess waives all further claim and right to contest the will and also approves of the appointment of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York as ancillary executor.

The will gives nothing to the widow except a portrait of herself and it acknowledges an indebtedness of $100,000.

OBREGON WOULD BLOCK TREATY WITH U. S.

Says Document Should Not Be Signed Preliminary to Recognition

By Associated Press.

Mexico City, Sept. 2.—Signature of a treaty with the United States preliminary to recognition of the Mexican government by that country is opposed by President Obregon.

In his message to the new Mexican congress, read last night before the lower house, the President took the position that such a treaty was "neither possible, convenient nor necessary, and is contrary to Mexican constitutional precepts, as it would create special privileges for Americans."

This statement was loudly applauded by the members of the House and by spectators.

Recognition of the Mexican government by Washington has long been delayed because of the refusal of President Obregon to negotiate first a treaty of commerce and amity.

The President's message was very voluminous and discussed the affairs of all departments of the government. It declared the country had been pacified, and that the national finances were in good condition. The message said cordial messages had been received from France and Switzerland.

MOB SPIRIT IS SCORED BEFORE U. S. BAR

Labor as Well as Lynching Mobs Denounced by Southern Lawyer

By Associated Press.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 2.—Impartial annihilation of the "whole poisonous, pestilential brood" of what generally is called the mob spirit is the only guaranty of national safety, Luther Z. Rosser of Atlanta, Ga., told the American Bar Association in an address on the illegal enforcement of the law this morning.

Lynching, he said, will cease only when negroes stop their attacks on white women and when the white people reach such a stage of self-control that they can restrain themselves in favor of the law—two things that are too deep-seated to be met by the law alone, but must be met by an awakening of public conscience and the uplift of the two races.

But lynching, he added, was only one phase of the mob spirit that "is constantly and industriously laying the axe at the root of government. Labor mobs, though different in their inception and make-up, were declared to be just as inimical to the safety of the nation.

"The lynching mob is born in a whirlwind of passion and survives but a day," he said. "In the presence of armed forces, it sinks away in the darkness and dissolves in terror.

"The labor mob too often is born of deliberation and preparation. It often lives long enough to exert its corrupting influence upon legislation and administration and to secure the universal object of all such mobs. Too often, in defiance of arms and constables, it continues its work of destruction and murder."

OLD RELIABLE! Remember Traffic Sergeant Pat McDonald at the last Olympic games? Well, the genial New York policeman will try and break his own record at the annual police games on Sept. 10. The newspaper asks for a revival of family prayers.

KELLEHER IS OUT FOR CAMBRIDGE MAYORALTY

Another complication in the Mayoralty scramble in Cambridge was introduced today when former Representative John A. Kelleher, a Boston attorney and former member of the Cambridge Board of Aldermen in 1913, 1914, 1915 and 1916, tossed his hat into the ring.

This made the fifth Democratic candidate to formally announce his entry into the race.

In addition to the present Mayor Edward W. Quinn, Ex-Alderman James F. Hack, Dr. John P. Gore and former City Councilor James S. Attwood are candidates.

SILLADAR CAPTURES BIG EVENT IN READVILLE'S CLOSING DAY RACES

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

A five-event program, bristling with thrills and close finishes, in which Tommy Murphy's three-year-old colt Silladar, Fred Edman's Legal J., and William J McDonald's Oregon Hal, were the leading figures, closed the most successful Grand Circuit meet yet staged on the Readville track.

Silladar came to fame when in straight heats he captured the Boston Globe, three-year-trot, in the second heat of which he lowered the record established by Worthy Chief by one and one-half seconds.

Legal J's contribution came in winning two and placing second in the third heat of the 2.16 class pace, in which he met one of the finest fields of sidewheelers ever to show at the Rose Hill track; while Oregon Hal pleased Owner McDonald's friends and local racing fandom generally by repeating the 2.16 class trot, winning two first and a third in the three heats.

* * *

Bragg, a Brook Farm bay horse, driven by Brusie, got the large slice of the game in the 2.10 trot, but there were many in the stands and lining the rail who believed Brusie should have enjoyed that privilege, for in the first two heats of the event the latter guiding, owned and driven by Tom Berry, seemed to have much his nose under the wire slightly ahead of the Brook Farm horse.

* * *

The final number of the program a handicap event for members of the Metropolitan Driving Club, in which the trotters and pacers entered got away from standing starts, proved not quite as satisfactory as many had expected for, except in the case of W J McDonald's Alba Todd, none of the horses carrying heavy handicaps was able to get in the racing

* * *

Mack S. owned and driven by A. Purbush won both heats from an 80 yard handicap, while McDonald's mare, from the 200-foot mark, captured second money with a second and a third place.

* * *

Governor Cox across brother, Walter Cox, has been one of the big winners on the Grand Circuit meets of the year was the sport of the part. It did not save the pleasure of witnessing a winning performance by a member of his brother's stable. The latters The Laurel Hall, which was entered in the three-year-old trot, climbed into second place in the second heat, and-by so doing captured second money. The Governor's brother also held the ribbons over W J McDonald's Northspur in the 2.10 class trot, but after that promising bad scored sixth in the first heat he was withdrawn from the event

* * *

Silladar got away to a late start in the first heat of the big event. The Boston Globe three-year-old trot, but before the quarter mile mark was reached he was out in front, with Lee Tide pressing him for the position. Silladar maintained his advantage at the head turn and down the stretch with Alta Quest coming from fourth place to second at the change down the stretch.

Says Mosquitoes Always Hang Around Places Where There Has Been Water. You'll Know What's Wrong if They Don't Bite You on the Neck

This is a great time of the year for mosquitoes. A mosquito is nice to your face, but he'll bite you when your back is turned.

They always go down to the depot to meet the train and ride up to the hotel on your neck.

You don't object to them riding on you. It's when they start to eat that makes you sore.

You wouldn't mind them taking a little dinner for themselves, but it's going too far when they invite company.

Mosquitoes are really very affectionate. They don't bite you, they just kiss you and it isn't their fault if their teeth get in the way.

They always hang around places where there has recently been water. You wouldn't believe this though when you see them biting some people on the neck.

A lot of mosquitoes become very much attached to some particular boarder and they won't eat anywhere else.

You'll notice that a mosquito will always hang around a pianist. They like music with their meals.

It doesn't make any difference to them how terrible the playing is. They'll go through anything to get a bite to eat.

One mosquito was out after a record. He bit a young lady pianist fourteen times during the recital and twenty-seven times during the chorus.

Then he sat back and waited for her to take an encore.

But the poor mosquito lost his bite. He got in between a fellow's hands while he was applauding.

There's a mosquito at Newport who's twenty years old. He has a biting acquaintance with some of the biggest society people in the country.

He's very exclusive though and won't bite a millionaire until he's looked up his financial rating.

He bit a millionaire's valet once and was despondent for two weeks.

He can bite a man once and tell whether he's been eating in the dining room or the kitchen.

No matter how many times you try to kill a mosquito you'll always find that he'll be down to the station to bite you goodbye.

KILBANE THINKS HE'S NOT DUE FOR PANNING

Johnny Kilbane doesn't think he deserves all the panning he has received for remaining idle at intervals as the featherweight champion of the world.

He believes in defending his title only against logical contenders.

That was the road he had to travel to become the champion in 1912.

"I had to dispose of all the contenders before I got a crack at Abe Attell's title," says Kilbane.

"From 1910 to 1912 I fought all the logical aspirants and eliminated them.

"Tom McCarey, promoter, held an elimination series of bouts for featherweights on the Pacific Coast. I whipped the five contenders.

"I had honored Abe Attell at Kansas City in 1910. He beat me. That gave me a line on him.

"I was offered $1,500 to go to the Coast and fight Joe Rivers. Rivers beat me.

"They rematched us. This time I knocked him out in sixteen rounds. That fight made me. I was then next in line for Attell.

"Attell had to fight me. I beat him and won the title in thirty rounds.

"Within the next year I defeated the four leading contenders for my newly won crown.

"Then came my first period of idleness as a champion. There were no more feathers of class to be whipped.

BOXED LIGHTWEIGHTS.

"I had to fight lightweights to keep busy. I boxed practically all of them.

"In 1916 I gave Kid Williams, bantam champ, a chance at me. He weighed 118¼ pounds and I scaled 119¼. I was his master.

"Soon after that I trained up for Benny Leonard, lightweight, and beat him.

"I fought Leonard again. This time he beat me. I wasn't knocked out, but my manager, Jimmy Dunn, stopped the fight after I was hurt.

"After that I had learned my lesson. Fighting out of one's class doesn't get you any credit, I found.

IT MAKES SO DIFFERENCE.

"I'm satisfied to raise the weight limit. I can fight either at 122 or 126. It makes no difference.

"I consider Danny Frush a real contender for my title now.

"That I can beat him, and will, then I'm going to retire for good and pass the title along.

"George Chaney was the last logical contender for my title. I knocked him out in three rounds at Cedar Point, O., in 1916.

"Up to now there haven't been any real feathers of class.

"The boys are fighting at 126 pounds at 2 o'clock, which means they go in the ring practically lightweights."

MONTANA KID A SUICIDE.

David Reese, whom old-time fight fans all over the country will remember as the Original Montana Kid, is dead.

One of the gamest little fighters who ever put on a glove killed himself in Colorado Springs August 17 after he had shot and seriously injured his wife. The Original Montana Kid had had a lot of domestic troubles before the fatal shooting.

The MontanaKid was the sensation of the boxing world twenty years ago. He gained considerable reputation by his gameness, for the old timers still talk about the night he attempted to knock out two fighters in one night at Denver.

The Kid beat Tommy Warren with blackened gloves in Denver and later jammed Jimmy Hogan in Wyoming. On this bout, more than $50,000 changed hands on bets alone. This was a lot of money in those days.

The now dead pugilist also beat Johnny Dobbs, a lightweight, after the latter had cleaned up everybody in this country and in England.

While the kid was a feather, he barred no one in his days, even taking on middleweights.

SAYS GEORGES' DAYS DONE IN THE RING

London Sporting Man Writes That Carpentier Is Not Keen on Fight Game

A confidential letter to a New York sporting writer from one of the best-informed sporting men in London says, among other things:

"There is extremely small chance that Carpentier ever will return to America to fight. His condition now is not good, and if he has any idea of returning to fight Tom Gibbons he is giving no indication of it.

"I watched him in Paris recently and I can't see a sign of his trying to keep in fighting condition. They report over there that he was hurt badly in the fight with Dempsey, but I doubt that, unless the hurt was in the heart.

"Just now they are talking of several matches for him, also in London, with the property staged set-ups to be knocked over, and one in Belgium.

"Brussels, by the way, is keen on boxing, and is not particular as to the quality—in fact, some of our third-raters and American boxers of the same type are making rather handsome profits by boxing exhibitions.

"Why should Georges return to the United States. There is a lot of soft money for him to pick up around here without any risk. We are taking now of matching him against Brennan, but the wise ones here think that Carpentier will dodge even that.

It would be more satisfactory if Carpentier refrains from boxing at all in the United States.

JOHNSTON AND KUMAGAE WILL BATTLE TODAY

New York, Sept. 3.—William M. Johnston of San Francisco will oppose Ichiya Kumagae of Japan in the opening singles match of the Davis cup challenge round at Forest Hills this afternoon. The match is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock. In the other singles event today William T. Tilden will meet Zenzo Shimidzu.

VIC RICHARDSON TALKS ABOUT HIGH PURSES AND UNWISE BOXERS

By JACK CONWAY

"Boxers, like the rest of the profiteers, must come down in their prices before the ring game will show normal respiration," declared Vic Richardson, manager of boxers and man around town in days when there was a town to be shot.

Victor then selected the guest's chair in the sporting department and after lighting a perfectly good Havana cigar, made in Tampa Fla., continued his discussion of the fistic art.

"I have known a lot of very ordinary fighters, the $50 and $100 kind, who asked as much as $1,000 to $1,500 for their services a year ago. Some of these same fighters still believe they are worth this much money for a ten-round bout, and as a result are remaining idle.

"The boxers must be more reasonable in their demands if the boxing game is to flourish. Then, too, the clubs are not entirely blameless. There are certain clubs who only want to pay a boxer about a third as much money for his services as he is worth.

* * *

"I am going to start a new fad novation for some of our present day fighters. I am managing two good boxers, Dick Russell and Mickey Travers.

"Russell weighs 126 pounds and formerly lived in Detroit. He has wins to his credit over Ralph Brady, Dick Loughran, Jimmy Brady, Frank Eagle, Charley Murray and a host of other good fighters.

"Russell now wants to get a bout with Chick Suggs, who recently won the New England featherweight title from Charley M. O. Elkins.

* * *

"Travers, on the other hand, would like to get a match with Louis Leonard.

"I don't want a guarantee for either of these boys. A fair percentage privilege will satisfy me. If other managers of boxers would permit their boys to battle for what they are capable of drawing in the box office rather than for what they desire, the ring game would take on new life of which it is this part of the country."

* * *

Al Delmont, a great bantamweight a decade ago and now manager and trainer of ambitious ring men, sends us the following:

"The following boys are now under my direction and in training, ready to go on at a moment's notice:

"Jack Perry, formerly of Pittsburgh, who has met Jack Britton four times, Ted Kid Lewis twice, Paul Doyle, Young Denny, Johnny Tillman, Marty Cross, Midburn Saylor, Eddie Shevlin and all the other welters of prominence.

"Mike Castle of Lawrence, who has not lost a fight in three years, and is a legitimate featherweight. How about Keegan, Suggs, Elkins, Shubert?

"Freddie Williams, who has beaten Young Chakas, Tony Julian and other good boys.

"Young Rosa, formerly of Pittsburgh, a very promising 122-pounder, with a good reputation.

"Frank Regan, formerly of Pittsburgh, a former sparring partner of Harry Greb, and Chick Conway, a youngster of nineteen, who tips the beam at 116 pounds.

"Young Joe Chick of Lawrence, 116 pounds, who in his last four fights won by the knock route.

"Matchmakers can get in communication with me by calling in person or telephoning to my gymnasium, No. 138 Hanover street."

GIBBONS SIGNS FOR THREE BOUTS IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 3.—Mike Gibbons, middleweight boxer, has signed to box three matches in St. Paul, the first, an open-air fight, September 15, against young Fisher, Syracuse, N. Y. The other two matches will be held some time in the Spring.

WILSON READY FOR TITLE GO WITH DOWNEY

Rival Boxers Have Merry Battle of Words; Reformers to Lay Off Bout

New York, Sept. 3.—Johnny Wilson of Boston and Bryan Downey of Cleveland, who will box for the middleweight title at Jersey City Monday, are engaging in pre-battle sparring over what a mauling is.

Informed that Wilson had termed him a "mauler, pure and simple," Downey today referred to his recent meeting with Wilson at Cleveland, which raised doubts as to who holds the title. "Yes, I'm a mauler," said Downey. "If putting a champion to the floor three times is a mauling."

Wilson called attention to the fact that his face is unmarked while Downey wears a headgear and a nose guard in his training.

Both boxers are confident as to the result of Monday's mauling, but are taking no chances on not being in perfect condition, for they plan to continue gymnasium work the next three days.

The international reform bureau, which tried unsuccessfully to prevent the Carpentier-Dempsey bout in the same ring in which Downey and Wilson will meet, announces that it has abandoned efforts to stop Monday's contest, but will endeavor to have the New Jersey boxing law repealed.

SOX OUT FOR REVENGE AFTER SETBACK BY CELLAR CHAMPIONS

By NICK FLATLEY

The Athletics and Red Sox went to it again this afternoon at the Fenway. The natives, who expected to get closer to the well-known first division at the expense of the Mackerels, were rudely shocked in the initial game, and had quite a job on their hands to pull out the long end of the series, if the Mackerels perform throughout as they did for a starter.

There wasn't much sport at the ball yard, but some 90 per cent of what was present was packed by the invaders.

* * *

Herbie Pennock was ready to do the Duffy singing today, with Elmer Myers in reserve if the southpaw didn't feel just fit at game time.

* * *

The tall and slim and efficient Harris was due to work for C. McGillicuddy, who escorts the smallest team in point of numbers that has swung around the large wheel in several seasons.

* * *

Boston's Fall styles don't change a bit. The habit of defeat leaped gracefully into the Fenway, and the Red Sox went down before the lowly Athletics to start their ultimate home stand.

The Mackerels grabbed the pastime, 4 to 3, and had it won all the way, though the Sox did surge enough to tie matters up at one time. But the tangle didn't last, and the invaders breezed down to the wire, as they said at Readville.

* * *

Sam Jones was defeated and Young Mister Hammel was the victor. Samuel was outpitched, although a decidedly doubtful error by Scotty created the skids for the first hostile count.

* * *

The Sox only got half a dozen base knocks off the nine youth, who has become quite a checker. They managed to combine some three to the fourth, and got a pair of markers. The other quartet [illegible] spread all around the box score.

* * *

It wasn't a colorful game at all. The athletes played hard enough, but they didn't have any of the fire and pep that creates loud applause. Tom McCabe got a bigger cheer for clutching a foul fly in the press peak than any of the heroes did for stunts on the field.

* * *

Those A's were mighty good on the defence at that, and a couple of swell plays hauled Rommel out of a threatening jam in the sixth chapter. Tilly Walker made a backhanded running stab of a Melnnis liner in left, and Galloping Gallivan with Scott's slash after a lunging dive. The two plays saved the game, around a lusty double that John Colins poked to centre, and the stellar efforts erased a flock of runs.

* * *

There was a lot of grabbing at decisions down there, was it not, where Umpire Wilson held forth. He gave the Sox none of the best of it, and Michael Meenehy was banishing from the orchard for—screeching at one called on him. Mike appeared to be as safe as the ice crop in Alaska.

* * *

The A's hopped into the lead in the third chapter, when Dykes blew a double to left, centre. After Galloway had arrived on one that broke through Scott and Witt had worked a pass The two runs were weaned up in the next round on hits by Pratt, Scott and McInnis and a Collins suicide fly.

* * *

Joe Dugan, who got three out of four, knocked off the other two runs that meant triumph for his toiling tribe. He slapped a single into left in the sixth, after Perkins had doubled and he rung up a two-baser in the eighth, following a single by the newest Eddie Collins

* * *

Apart from the fourth, the Duffies' only real scoring chance came in the next chapter, which Jones blasted open with a double to centre. But Sam was marooned when the next three athletes failed to knock the agate away from enemy mitrens.

SENATORS PICK THREE NEW PITCHERS

President Clark Griffith Pays Fancy Prices for New Players

President Clark of the Senators has made deals for three promising minor league pitchers, Ray Francis, star southpaw of the Seattle club; Joe Bird, a husky left-hander who has done fine work for Shreveport in the Texas League, and Slim McGraw, a right-hander with Galveston, of the same league. They will go to Tampa with the Griffs next Spring

The trio of flingers will have a new battery partner in Catcher Dorman, formerly of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, who was picked up in San Francisco by Scout Joe Engel.

The Francis deal is a big one and it is believed, looking at it from the right angles, that he is the best selection that could have been made from the Pacific Coast League. He is Seattle's pitching mainstay, and it is stated that he will cost Washington $20 000 in money and players, the identity of the latter are not being revealed

The acquisition of Bird, southpaw, indicates that the Senators will continue its recent policy of featuring left-handed pitching. An analysis of Texas League box scores and opinions of magnates and writers on that circuit will convince any one that he is an excellent prospect

McGraw is a brand new phenom of this year's crop. He is described as a second Bryan Harris, only more so He is taller than Harris and is said to have more stuff in general than Connie Mack's star. But he is green and still "a long way off" However such experts as Manager Billy Smith of Shreveport, and Manager Roy Ellam of Galveston say he will be a great pitcher after he gets the necessary polishing and experience

BRAVES OLD JINX BACK, NOSED OUT IN 1-0 GAME

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 2.—Perhaps there never was such a thing as a lively ball. Nobody except the fans, players, umpires, managers and ground tenders believe that there was. But if there was it was not in evidence today when Johnny Watson and Lee Meadows hooked up in the finest pitching duel that Philadelphia has seen this season.

The hard luck of it was that the Phillies scored the only run of the game and won by a 1 to 0 count, in spite of the fact that the Braves batters collected five hits off Meadows, while the best the Phils could do was an even quartet off Watson.

* * *

It was a brilliant game in other ways than the pitching. Pestilential bits of fielding by both teams cut off numerous raps that looked as though they were going to start the fireworks.

* * *

The classic tally of the game drifted along in the second inning when Wrightstone pulled a vicious wallop down the right field foul line that Hoke missed by inches. Konetchy had previously been retired and Parkinson then fouled to O'Neil, but Wrightstone got away with a clean plifer of second and came all the way home when Henline jammed a liner to centre for a single. That was enough to send Watson ambling to third. Barbare sacrificed, but Southworth's rap was garnished in by Meadows and he was tossed out. Then Cruise was passed, filling the bases and setting the hardest task in baseball to Boeckel, who tried hard, but Cy Williams gathered in his long fly.

The Braves fought desperately in the seventh to get back that run, but failed. Hoke opened with a single to centre and Ford advanced him to second with a neat bit of bunting. Hoke raced to third while Jimmy Smith was tossing out O'Neil. Christenberry was sent up for Watson as a last hope to get that tally over and Meadows worked as he never worked before, fanning him. That was the last chance.

President John Conway Poole, of the International League, has announced that the following members of the Baltimore club are eligible for the inter league series with the American Association for the minor league championship, scheduled for October:

The announcement indicates that Baltimore is conceded the pennant.

DORCHESTER A. A. LABOR DAY GAME CANCELLED

Owing to a last minute cancellation by Winthrop Post, A. L., the Dorchester A. A. is without a game for Labor Day away from home. SOCCER LEAGUE IS ASSURED OF SUPPORT

New Organization Plans to Stage Matches at Big League Ball Parks

The formation of the National Soccer League, with clubs located in the New York-Philadelphia district, appears to be the start of a professional league. The Brooklyn and Philadelphia National League parks have been leased to the promoters for the Winter season. Trenton, Newark, Jersey City and Bayonne baseball parks will be taken over by the footballers for the Winter

There is a certainty that soccer is coming rapid to the front, for one of the National League clubs to ever be the field now occupied by the major baseball leagues is in the near future assured. Negotiations for the use of the Polo Grounds during the Winter season seem not to have reached a successful point.

The six-club National League will play a split season, the first half ending January 1 and the second half in April. It is probable that Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and possibly New York will join the National Soccer League before the season ends, permitting the league to play the second half of the split season

RANDOLPH ANSWERS ALPHA A. A. CHALLENGE

"We have only one open date, and that is tomorrow, Saturday, September 2. We shall be gald to arrange the game for tomorrow and suggest that Manager Bean call Randolph 100-J."

Recapitulation: Matches 15. Australasia won 6, British Isles won 5, United States won 4.

New York, Sept. 2.—Appearing for the first time as challengers for the Davis Cup, the trophy emblematic of the world's tennis championship, the Japanese team will meet the American defenders today on the court of the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, Long Island

Tois will be the sixteenth battle for the international trophy donated in 1900 by Dwight F. Davis, of St. Louis, who at that time shared the American net championship with Holcombe Ward

During the life of the cup it has been held six times by Australasia players, five times by British Isles players and four times by the Americans

The matches beginning today will consist of four singles contests and one at doubles

The American team is composed of William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, William M. Johnston of San Francisco, Watson M. Washburn and R. Norris Williams.

The Japanese team is made up of Ichiya Kumagae, captain; Zenzo Shimidzu and Seiichro Kashio. It is not likely that the latter will be seen in the matches as he is the weakest of the three and hardly a worthy opponent of any of the Americans.

In selecting the American team the Davis Cup committee of the Lawn Tennis Association drew Tilden and Johnston for the singles and Williams and Washburn for the doubles

The ability of these four players is of much calibre that the Japanese challengers are rated very highly against them by experts

Kumagae and Shimidzu won the right to represent the American team by their victory over the Australasian team at Newport last week. Kumagae won two singles matches and Shimidzu one. They were beaten in the doubles event by Anderson and Todd.

Kumagae a native of Tokio, though small of stature (he weighs 135 pounds and is five-feet four inches in height), is noted for his endurance and the aggressiveness of his back court play

He is a free hitter from all parts of the court, whether the ball comes to his forehand or backhand He always goes out for his shots and his willingness and endurance making him a strong five set player

Tilden, the ace of the American team, depends upon a wide variety of strokes, from a slam, teasing twist to the "tennis-ball" straight over. He advances to the net at the first opportunity and depends upon his great reach and agility to block attempted passes

Unlike Tild as method of handling volleys, Johnston's returns are hard and deep. The California ace is noted for the terrific speed of his forehand drive

He is very active and plays an aggressive game. He is weakest on service, but this is offset by the power of his driving

Williams is one of the most sensational players on American courts. It is his habit to take all ground strokes on the fly and his accuracy of timing shots often results in marvelous placements. He serves deep and hard and, like Johnston, is not likely where his volleying is clean cut and decisive

In Washburn Williams has an able partner for doubles He is a great court coverer and plays a reserved yet steady and aggressive game

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

Mexican Petroleum Goes to 101, Then Rallies, in Irregular New York Market

SAY PLUNGER IS CAUGHT IN COTTON

Unfavorable News From Mexico Regarding Settlement Checks Advance in Mex Pete

Steel mills may close, railway locomotives may run to rust—chances are we'll not disappear from the daily menu of the white collar class, but cigarettes!

The men—and some of the women—must have them. Here is the evidence:

Cigarette production in the United States in June was 3.4 per cent. ahead of June, 1920. Cigar production was off 12 per cent., and output of manufactured tobacco off 8 per cent. Snuff increased 6.9 per cent., the first increase shown by this branch in any month this year.

For six months, cigarette production shows a gain of 5.3 per cent. Other lines show declines amounting to 20 per cent. in cigars, 16 per cent. in manufactured tobacco and 17 per cent in snuff. Following compares six months' production:

Production of cigarettes in first six months was at record rate of 51,-940,000,000 a year. This compares with 44,651,000,000 in 1920, 44,804,-000,000 in 1919, which was the heaviest production of any year, and with 37,800,000,000 in 1918.

Output of cigars in first half of 1921 was at annual rate of 6,485,-000,000, which compares with a record high of 7,900,000,000 in 1920, 6,857,000,000 in 1919 and 6,930,000,-000 in 1918.

There is intense interest—especially among stockholders—in the progress being made by the New Haven system. R. S. Lovett, chairman, reports having a tendency to encourage those who aim to be optimistic.

For the first time in 1921 the New Haven, in July, showed a substantial operating profit of $485,255 after taxes and joint facility rentals. Operating revenues were about $12,-000 larger than had been anticipated. Expenses were some $200,000 less than expected earlier in August.

As a result, the deficit after interest and all other charges, in July, was only $857,700. This brings the total deficit after charges for the first seven months of 1921 to approximately $13,452,000.

It would not take much more business, with the present reduced wages and fuel costs, to enable the New Haven to earn its charges. And this is the president of the road says that business is the crux of the whole situation.

New Haven is now in the best months of its year. If freight and passenger business had held up, the road would be comfortably earning fixed charges. It is possible it may do so in August and September.

July gross earnings were considerably the largest of the year to date, but did not show the normal seasonal improvement. They were $6,-743,000 in July, 1921, in spite of the increase in freight and passenger rates.

On June 30 the Boston & Maine showed $29,342,652 of current and current assets over current liabilities.

Current liabilities of the New Haven exceeded those of the Boston & Maine by $12,164,900.

The Boston & Maine on June 30 showed $9,833,9254 of cash, compared with $23,326,580 of current liabilities, against $29,-159,555 of current assets and December 31 last current assets exceeded current liabilities by $4,223,000, against a $9,525,000 excess on September 30 last.

The traffic and car balances payable on the Boston & Maine have steadily mounted higher during present months, the same as on the New Haven.

The total for the Boston & Maine on June 30 stood at $11,331,191, against $10,711,182 on March 31, and $6,947,000 on September 30 last. Maintenance of equipment charges declined $813,277,996 on June 30, against $14,-143,016 on March 31, $12,710,000 on December 31, and $9,713,000 at the close of last September.

The Harding administration seems determined to follow out its proposed financial relief for the railroads. The decision to proceed with the plan, regardless of any attempt by Congress to throw obstacles in its path, is gathering news to railroad investors. The President backs up those with the carriers on a sounder foundation. Business throughout the country would be in a better position to expand.

* * *

Should the rates on grain and grain products and hay existing prior to the increases placed in effect one year ago be restored, the saving to the farmer would be small while it would result in the loss of millions to the carriers and bankruptcy for some. Testimony to this effect was presented by the railroads at the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of the Western States and Grain organizations for rate reductions.

A. F. Cleveland, assistant freight traffic manager of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company testified that tabulations showed that the individual farmer in South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota would be benefitted only from $9 to $31 on his annual grain crop.

On the other hand to require the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad to reduce its revenues on these commodities to the level that they were advanced in 1920 would cost that road $4,430,194 at a time when they are not meeting our operating expenses," said Mr. Cleveland.

"During the first six months this year the Chicago & Northwestern had an operating deficit of $3,567,055. If we are required to reduce the rates on these commodities, it would bring that figure up to $5,800,000. That does not take into account bonded indebtedness and dividends. That would not mend the bankruptcy of a road considered to be conservatively managed and a consistent dividend payer."

Sugar Business

The American Sugar Refining Company continues to do a fair sized export business in refined sugar. It has just bought 18,000 bags of San Domingos afloat, 1,000 bags of San Domingo raws and 1,000 bags of Surinams in port at 2.75 cents c. i. f. against export orders. This follows a purchase of 2,000 tons of San Domingos last week, and 2,000 bags of San Domingos Monday at the same price of 2.75 cents. These purchases were also to cover export business.

Price of export refined quoted about 4.30 cents a pound free alongside steamer, against recent high of 4.60, but even at the lower level the refiners' margin figures about 1.55 cents a pound, when full-duty sugar is considerably at 2.75 cents. Domestic price for refined sugar is 6.50 cents less 2 per cent. or about 6.18 net cash. With raw sugars quoted 4.61 cents duty-paid, refiners' margin on the business figures only about 1.17 cents.

Business Items

There was sold in the United States during 1920 more than 4,000,000 tons of phosphate rock—far exceeding any previous year in point of tonnage. The value was $26,000,000, likewise a record breaker, being more than double the value of any previous twelve months' period in the history of the trade. Phosphate rock last year exceeded production by 725,000 tons.

Treasury markets last week received 252,000 bales of cotton, 7,000 more than the previous week, and 52,000 bales more than the same week last year to date total 7,182,000 bales against 6,978,000 bales, according to the weekly report. Last week was one of the biggest in some time and the movement was 40,000 bales less than the week before and $35,000 a year ago.

Copper Production

Copper production for August is estimated at 38,000,000 pounds by Engineering and Mining Journal. This is 2,000,000 pounds more than in July, but 6,000,000 pounds, and deliveries at 80,000,000 pounds.

Total United Metals Selling Company is reported to be in business in copper at less than 13¾ cents per pound for large amounts, although there is some metal nominal at lower prices by outside companies.

Copper men feel that the dip to under twelve cents per pound last week was temporary and was induced not so much by a fundamental weakening in the position of the metal as it was by speculation here and in London.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Dullness again ruled in Thursday's stock market, and it is probable that the approaching holiday had something to do with the restricted operations. With the exception of a few issues, it looked as if transactions were largely confined to the closing out of commitments prior to the three-day interim, which will last over Labor Day. Profit taking by room traders, as reported by Payne, Webber & Company, are:

"Reserves are now more than ample and forecast a plethora of idle funds.

"Good crops of 1921 are safely made and add billions to the nation's wealth.

"The railroads have finally turned the corner and seem assured of an increasing traffic at the highest rates ever paid.

"There will be unlimited work for labor and capital in the rebuilding stock of the railroads, meeting the housing demand as well as other callings. Since the adjustment of wages makes such improvements economically possible.

"This will be the season of the year when business as well as stock markets resume activity, in response to the outcome of the harvest and the demand for all classes of goods created thereby."

Most issues opened unchanged on the Curb. Business was very quiet. Boston & Montana and Mutual were the most conspicuous, the former opening unchanged and, later gaining a cent. Mutual was weak from the start and at noon it was showing a loss of 1 cents.

Rapidol and Crowley advanced 1 cent each, and Alpha lost 1 cent.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES

Average 1921 bank clearings of cities and towns in Eastern Massachusetts is $27.72, against $28.15 in 1920, $31.58 in 1919, the rate of $30.39 a thousand bonds. But, while the decrease is large, it is less than the decrease suffered in Jackson & Curtis, Boston Stock Exchange firm, which reports a loss of 1,000 members since January 1, 1922 to 1921, inclusive, and September 1, 1922 to 1921, inclusive, and 1,500 members in 1920.

Liverpool, Sept. 2.—Stocks opened in fair demand; prices firm. Middling uplands 13.16d; middling Orleans 13.16d; sales 10,000 bales, including 1,000 bales for speculation and export. Receipts 12,000 bales, including 10,000 bales of American. Futures opened steady: September 13.16d; October 13.16d; November 13.16d; December 13.16d; January 13.16d; February 13.16d; March 13.16d; April 13.16d; May 13.16d; June 13.16d; July 13.16d. Futures closed steady: September 13.16d; October 13.16d; November 13.16d; December 13.16d; January 13.16d; February 13.16d; March 13.16d; April 13.16d; May 13.16d; June 13.16d; July 13.16d.

Railway Items

Chicago & North Western loadings for twenty-seven days of August were 139,546 cars, a decrease of 7,662.

Same Road loadings for twenty-six days of August were 129,884 cars, a decrease of 7,662.

July earnings of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads in this month and are being taken as an argument for continuance of the present rate structure, which the market has discounted for a long period. Reports of the Pere Marquette, for example, before rate increases, and dividend action before the war, showed earnings on stock less in the month.

Leather Failures

The failures of harnessmaste, etc. in the shoe, leather and kindred lines in the United States and Canada for the week ended as compiled by the Shoe & Leather Mercantile Agency, Inc., numbered 5, against 4 the week before, for the preceding week, and 7 for the corresponding week last year. The failures were of an unimportant nature.

New England Building

The F. W. Dodge Company reports statistics of building and engineering operations in New England for week ending August 20: 1921, $4,350,000; 1920, $4,901,000; 1919, $8,-480,000; 1918, $4,646,000; 1915, $2,520,000; 1914, $2,-678,000.

Money Pool at Work

During money centers the New York bankers who in wartime used to be known as the "money pool," have been leaders of most in the call market and their activities are day currently reported in the press of some $6,000,000.

Call money today at 8½ per cent. and probable would have reached a higher figure, but for the fact that a little stream of bankers' balances has started northward to replenish the funds of reserve banks, of course, the movement of crops and the necessity caused as funds permanently transferred.

The recent action of the bankers is a voluntary one, and is being hailed by the same men who had charge of the "money pool" in war time.

It is estimated that the pool has accumulated $25,000,000 of call funds at its disposal.

Dividends Declared

American Woolen Company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent., payable October 15 to stock of record September 30. Nineteen months ago the company declared a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent., payable July 15, 1920. This is the first semi-annual dividend that the pool has accumulated $25,000,000 of call funds at its disposal.

ANOTHER GAIN IN COTTON MARKET

New York Prices Up From 25 to 40 Points on Day's First Sales

New York, Sept. 2.—The cotton market had another big opening today and showed an advance of from 25 to 40 points on first sales. This was followed by further sharp upturns after the call on heavy continental and Liverpool buying to which was added commission house buying on a big scale.

All months but October were above the 18-cent level this morning.

Trade buying also was in evidence at the start, while Liverpool cables showed pronounced strength.

The selling was mostly from the South and from long interests taking profits over the holiday. At the end of the first fifteen minutes the market was active and still advancing, about five to seven points net higher on December contracts.

CLEMENCEAU LIKELY TO RETURN TO POLITICS

WHY DO YOU CODDLE CORNS?

A Simple Touch Can End Them and At Once

Why pare a corn and keep it?
Why pad it and let it remain?
Or why treat it in old ways, harsh, crude and uncertain?

Millions have found a new way. It is Blue-jay—the plaster or the liquid. A touch applies it, and the pain stops instantly. Then the whole corn quickly loosens and comes out.

The way is gentle, scientific, sure. A famous expert evolved it. A world-famed surgical dressing house produces it.

Is it freeing thousands of people why not you? Try it on one corn and you will always let it end yours. Start tonight.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS

ONE of the joys of being entirely interested in the motion picture industry is the fact that there is always something entirely new dropping up. Today the chief topic of conversation in film circles is the suit brought against Douglas Fairbanks and United Artists, Incorporated, by the Triangle Film Corporation.

This company claims that in July, 1915, they produced a motion picture, "D'Artagnan," based on the novel by Dumas, "The Three Musketeers." The picture was duly copyrighted at the time and Fairbanks is accused of having infringed on the copyright. The Dumas story doesn't enter the case in any way, since there has been no copyright on it. On the other hand, the Triangle Company states that the 315 scenes, plots, wordings and pictures of their original film have all been made use of in Fairbanks' production.

The plaintiffs ask that the defendants be kept from exhibiting their picture, be required to render an account of the gains and profits made during the present showing on Broadway, and be required to pay the costs of the suit. Meanwhile "The Three Musketeers" is playing to crowded houses and they are turning away people in hordes.

Several well known lawyers were asked yesterday to give their opinion as to the outcome. In nearly every case they felt that the plaintiffs have little hope of winning. It is not possible, they claim, for one company to stop another from showing a picture based on the same story when the original novel was not copyrighted. Another lawyer felt that no producer could have scenes copyrighted when the original story was not protected in any way. As any rate, we hear that Doug's smile has not diminished.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK REMINISCES.

PICKING up his old cues as Dr. Arbutus Budd in the screen version of his stage success, "The Beauty Shop," being filmed by Cosmopolitan, has brought back memories to Raymond Hitchcock. At the studio in the Bronx the other day he told of his start in public life.

It was a circus which came to his home town, Auburn, N. Y., that first stirred in his breast a longing to be an actor. He added himself to the staff by helping to carry water for the elephants and stayed around until they gave him an opportunity to be in the parade. It is with great pride that Hitchcock announces that his first portrayal was as the Goddess of Liberty. He was nine years old at the time, "and a beautiful child," he modestly confesses.

During the parade he was on top of a big van, while a man stood beside him with a forked stick to raise the telegraph wires ahead. Then came along an each wire was passed the man struck a dignified attitude, until he began to attitudinize more than raise wires. One line suddenly got Hitchy under the chin and he landed in a store window with a bang. "It was my first taste of publicity," he says, "and decided my future career. I ate it up."

SWEDISH PICKFORD CHOSEN.

SIGRID HOLMQUIST'S work in the Cosmopolitan production, "Just Around the Corner," written and directed by Frances-Marion, was responsible for her being chosen to play the part opposite Eugene O'Brien in his next Selznick feature, "Prophet's Paradise."

Miss Holmquist is known as the "Swedish Mary Pickford," not so much for her personal resemblance to "Our Mary" as for her standing in her own country, which corresponds to the Pickford standing here. I met Miss Holmquist at the Metro studio in New York just after she came to this country. The first question she asked was, "Do you think I look like 'your Mary?' I think she is very lovely, but I want to be known as Sigrid Holmquist!" Miss Holmquist is far more blonde than Mary, slightly taller and slimmer, while her eyes are blue and her face is a more pronounced oval.

CAMERA CLICKS

PARAMOUNT has borrowed Madge Bellamy, Thomas H. Ince's "find," from the latter producer to appear with Jack Holt in his first starring picture, "The Call of the North."

KATHERINE MacDONALD has bought "Chastity," an original story by Ernest Pascal, for her next independent production.

THOUGH Conway Tearle is "starred and Martha Mansfield is featured in "A Man of Stone," it is Betty Howe who walks off with nearly all the honors of the picture. As an Indian girl in a fairly small role she clearly outshines the rest.

"LEFTY" FLYNN, ex-football player and movie star, has been signed up with the Fox organization to be the "real man" in "A Real Man." Molly Malone, another Goldwyn player, has been recruited to appear opposite him.

KNICKER SUITS BANNED IN HUB SCHOOLS

Girls With Immodest Rolled Stockings and Rouge Will Be Sent Home

Boston girls who flit to school and attempt to convert dressing rooms into beauty parlors for rouging and powdering, and applying just one more "love pat" to their rolled stockings will be sent home to have a real face wash and change to full length hosiery.

This, in effect, is the official pronouncement of Superintendent of Schools Frank V. Thompson. And the censors will be the astute school "mamma," who the superintendent declares have been invested with authority to give girls such guidance and suggestions as will insure a modest and inconspicuous presence—if you please.

Bobbed hair? That's perfectly permissible—if "simply and hygienically arranged." Who is going to pass on this phase of the thing no one seems to know, but it is presumed that the teachers will.

"We are training our young girls for womanhood, and we intend to instill the proper ideals right now," said Superintendent Thompson. "We don't believe our girls will come to school as if they were performers in a circus, but if they do, they shall be sent home until they learn better.

"Neither will the over use of make-up be allowed in any class room. And as for immodest skirts and stockings, we have too much confidence in our girls to expect such flagrant bad taste."

As for "knicker suits," they're also taboo. Skirts will continue to be the reigning style in Boston schools, the superintendent avers.

It would seem Preston's maids are to be very prim and proper when they respond to the school bell Sept. number 14.

"WAR" IN NICARAGUA REMAINS A MYSTERY

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 2.—Nicaragua has been for nearly ten days operating under a government declaration that a state of war has existed. The republic is overrun by government forces, schools are closed and the salaries of government employes have been reduced. Concrete reports of any enemy worthy of the name being in the field, however, are entirely missing.

"We're All Criminals," Says He

But It Really Is Not So Bad

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Professor Tridon, psychologist, says that 1,750,000,000 human beings, everybody on earth, are more or less criminal. It is a question of controlling criminal instincts. Some do well, some badly. The better off you are, the more easily you control it. We are descendants of savages, those savages in turn were descendants of wild beasts—according to the scientific theory, and their instincts are with us. The war, that made killing not only legal but honorable, revives the old savagery.

A church in New York State is to exhibit moving pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. A grateful clergyman writes that the exhibition will pay the church's debt. Very desirable. A first-class dog fight, properly managed, might also help to pay a church's debt.

Exhibition of the Dempsey Carpentier moving picture violates a Federal law, just as a dog fight would violate a State law. Woe to him through whom evil shall come.

Angels weep over the foolishness of all human beings fighting each other. The white races may laugh and congratulate themselves on the foolishness of brown and yellow races, hating and killing each other with such extraordinary bitterness, that they forget about the ruling whites.

You have seen horses kicking at each other in the stable. In comes the stableman, slips the collars over their heads, hooks the traces, lays on the whip, and away. You wonder why the horses kick EACH OTHER, instead of kicking the man that drives them.

In India just now Mohammedans are murdering Hindoos. They would rather do that even than fight the English that rule them both. So in another part of Asia. China is busy hating Japan. Their Asiatic hatreds mean white safety, time to get back our breath, after the war.

Millions of children starving in Russia, several times as many million adults.

For a loan of $50,000,000 in real money, the Bolshevik government would give a mortgage on the whole of Russia—everything they have. But who will lend the money? And who would collect?

Bankers won't lend any money to North Dakota because some of the farmers presumed to manage some of their own business. How much less would banks lend to the Bolsheviki—that is unless the Bolsheviki had actual gold to offer?

Bodies of American sailors killed on the ZR-2 will be brought home on His Majesty's ship Dauntless. A literary young editorial writer says this is "altogether fitting." It would have been altogether fittingger, so to speak, if those men's lives had been saved by ordinary caution, and they had returned alive on an ordinary American boat.

Everybody apparently, except those responsible for the welfare of the American sailors, knew that the ZR-2 was dangerous. According to an editorial in the Weekly Manchester Guardian of July 8, last, England was trying to GIVE AWAY her air machines, but "no private concern has come forward to undertake the risk." Foolish, Easy Mark Uncle Sam came forward, paid a million and a half in advance and sacrificed his best young air men.

It seems that working men now hold in Germany the power that the Kaiser recently misused. And they, the workers, announce very emphatically that they have had enough of the Kaiser and his friends.

Ebert, former harnessmaker, now President of the German Republic, has practically put the whole country under martial law. And the little lieutenants that used to strut with their single eyeglasses and their padded chests, have been notified to go to work and stop their nonsense. An excellent thing for Germany.

The Automobile a Good Home

A Bird With Wings Gets Along With a Small Nest

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

The Labor Department says this country built more houses, that is, garages, for automobiles, than houses for human beings.

Everybody gets excited, but for no good reason. An automobile in itself "big or little" is a pretty good "home."

The writer within a month has seen on the edge of the Pacific Ocean and in valleys of the Catskills, in New York State, entire families, very comfortable, living and traveling in the "automobile home."

By day, like birds, they go where they please. And by night they attach a simple tent to the side of the car, light the fire, cook the food, go to sleep early. And the grand Turk on his mattress stuffed with rose leaves—if he has one—might envy them that sleep.

Everything that helps the automobile helps the whole human race. Anybody would rather be a bird with wings, able to go where it pleases, with a very simple little nest for home, rather than a slow moving bear, with the largest, heaviest kind of a home cave. The human being with an automobile is as free as a bird with wings, and if the worst comes to the worst, the automobile makes a pretty good nest, and it need not cost much.

An Italian traveler said to this writer: "You Americans are a strange people. I have been all over your country and I find that the FIRST idea is to get an automobile, the SECOND idea is to get a home."

That proves that the Americans are intelligent, not "strange." All progress is away from the oyster, anchored to its rock. And the automobile is the greatest improvement on the oyster that the world has yet seen. Buy a car.

If anybody says "you can't afford to have it," answer, "I'm no rock-bound oyster, and I can't afford NOT to have it."

Caterpillars as Pets

By SIR WILLIAM BULL, M. P.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—There are queer trades in the world.

The other day I discovered a new one.

Peter comes into my dressing room when I am shaving.

The other morning he came—in tears. I inquired the cause thereof.

"Theodore climbed out of the corset box on the floor, and I stepped on him by mistake, and Anthony said he is glad he's dead," came the answer, in one breath.

"And who is Theodore?" said I.

"He's a hop dog."

"And what was he doing in a corset box?"

"It's where he lives."

"Surely a funny place for a dog to live in?" I inquired.

"It's not a dog, it's a caterpillar; I got it from the caterpillar merchant."

It appears my small sons have commercial dealings with a polite gentleman at Bexley, who "deals in ova, larva and pupae," and I understand you never know when you may come across specimens escaped from corset boxes.

"Never mind," I said generously, as Peter's tears started afresh, "I will stand you another."

"Any one I like?" said Peter, eagerly.

"Of course," I said recklessly.

Peter ran out of the room, to return with a dog-eared file of correspondence and catalogues. Turning them over hastily, he said: "I think I shall write for a Pin Hank."

"What will that cost?" I suddenly asked, feeling rather insecure at the awe in his voice. He handed me the catalogue. The Pin Hank was 15s. ($3.75).

"I'm not going to spend 15s. ($3.75) on a caterpillar in these hard times," said I firmly.

Peter turned to go, weeps in sorrow than anger. And so, relenting, I said I would stand him a Small Greasy Fyh.

"That'll only cost 9d," said he contemptuously. I felt myself it did not sound a generous solution. "What about a Peppered Black Var?" I hazarded.

"No," said Peter, "that's only 2s. (50 cents), but if you give me 2s. 6d. I will put it to, my half crown left over from my birthday and buy a Poulli brad from a Pink Female. That will cost 5s."

"What would it cost if bred from any other colored female?" I inquired humorously.

"I don't know," said Peter; and he sat down at once to write to the caterpillar merchant.

MUM—FROM MUMMY

Dunn—They say you had many secrets that are lost to the modern world.

Bunn—Yes; look how they made their women dry up and stay that way for centuries.

CRUEL! CRUEL!

Ethel—She spends a great deal of money on beautifying herself, doesn't she?

Clara—Yes; she spends a great deal of money!

TECHANICALLY THE SAME

"I want to buy a make-up box," said a young married man. "A make-up box?" the confectioner echoed. "We don't keep theatrical supplies." "I mean a box of chocolates to take home to my wife," said the young man. "I promised to be home three hours ago."

THE ILL-WIND

The newly-elected Mayor of a country town was about to make his first journey in that capacity through the place. The townspeople had arranged that from an arch of flowers, under which he was to pass, a floral crown should be hung, surmounted by the words, "He well deserves it." But the wind blew away the crown, and when the Mayor passed under the arch only a rope with a noose at the end of it dangled, with "He well deserves it" standing out in bold relief above it.

Costly Dinner

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Paris has been introduced to the "progressive dinner" by Alfred Black, manufacturer, of Pittsburgh.

Beginning with cocktails at a famous cafe on the boulevards, Black, with Mrs. Black and George Weatherton of New York, drove to a restaurant in Montmartre which makes a specialty of serving eighty varieties of hors d'oeuvres. Having sampled these, they paid their bill and drove to the Cafe de Paris for filleted sole.

From the Cafe de Paris they pilgrimed to a famous restaurant near the Madeleine, where they ate the house specialty, roast veal.

Next they had chicken on the Champs Elysees.

Vegetables were obtained four miles away at a tiny place on the Seine.

Salad the party ate near the Place de la Concorde, and at the Arc de Triomphe they found a restaurant that helped them to fruit.

Then they had cigars and cafe in the Bois de Boulogne. The dinner is believed to have been one of the most expensive on record and cost $600. The tips alone amounted to $100. The size of the bill was accounted for by the fact that the supercilious attitude of the waiters made them order wine at every stop.

WHO'S BOSS?

When you see a sedan you can pretty nearly figure who is boss in the family.

Very often one member of the family will want certain windows open and the others will want them closed, and it is usually the men who want the fresh air no matter how much dust comes with it.

But why should an automobile ride be spoiled by the inflexible demands of one or the other member of the family, especially by the obstinacy of either husband or wife.

If a ride is to be disagreeable, why go?

If there is constant wrangle over where one shall go or how, why own a machine?

In regard to window opening and closing there should be a give and take spirit and this spirit should extend from the husband and wife to all members of the household.

Neither husband nor wife has a right to be dictator and insist upon certain ideas being carried out at the time.

One person's comfort should not mean discomfort to all the rest.

Letters to the Editor

Rights of Ireland

Editor Boston American:

The Boston American is to be congratulated upon its unswerving attitude in regard to the rights of Ireland to have a government of its own choice. Many of our American papers during the recent Peace Conference that took place between President De Valera and Lloyd George advised the former to accept the terms of the British government as the best obtainable at the present time. Such advice does but portray the crass ignorance and potent hypocrisy of the writers in question, for the simple reason that they know, or at least should know, that President De Valera has absolutely no right whatsoever to barter away the sovereignty of his country, even were he so disposed.

One must keep in mind the fact that the question of sovereign independence on the one hand or abject slavery on the other was solemnly placed before the Irish people as a means of ascertaining the will of the majority as to the form of government desired. The result, which is now well known, was an overwhelming demand for a republican form of government. Thus, De Valera and his associates were elected to preserve, not to destroy, the Irish republic. They were elected, not to sue for peace and accept whatever terms Perfidious Albion felt it expedient to offer them, but, on the contrary, they received a mandate from the Irish people, and that mandate was specific in its terms and left no choice as to what should be done in a contingency such as confronts them today. Moreover, that mandate is binding until revoked by the Irish electorate.

If, however, war must be resumed between the two nations, it is, indeed, a sad commentary on the justice and conscience of civilization. Yet, come what may, Erin must secure justice, and though the struggle is not terminated in our day, we at least may glory in the fact that we helped to hand down to posterity, untarnished and untainted from political corruption and human slavery, the great race of Wolfe Tone, Emmet and Pearse.

LUKEWARM LOVE AND MODERN NOVELS

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

B-R-R-R, what a book!

It makes me shiver, only to think of it.

And yet, it's really wholesome and human—for a modern novel.

There are children in it, and there's a home and a devoted husband, and there are neighbors and simple, honest friends.

Of course, there's a villain—what would a novel be without that? And he's a thoroughly modern villain, to be sure.

Quite pleased with himself and absolutely sure that everyone who looks at life differently from the way he looks at it is a hopeless idiot.

He's in love with the wife and mother. She isn't the slightest particle in love with him, but her husband's very busy and her children are a bit troublesome and she's devoted to music and doesn't get the time for it she ought to have. And she's fond of books and pictures, and sunsets and moonrises and so's the villain.

And she likes delicate fabrics and good furniture and the right colors and it makes a good deal of difference to her whether the yellow flowers are in the blue bowl or in the red one.

Also, she is temperamental.

And she thinks it exciting to have someone in love with you—desperately, romantically in love, when you're thirty-five and married and settled and have three children and a perfectly good, matter-of-fact, prosaic husband, who has forgotten how to write sonnets and who never really did know how to make ardent love, no matter how deeply he felt it.

Husband? Oh, husband is a man, a real man! Honest and good and intelligent and sane, and rather keen, too, if anybody should ask you.

He knows all about the little affair the villain is attempting to bring about, and he never lifts a finger or even an eyebrow.

He's quite modern, too, you see—so he thinks it is not his affair at all and he wouldn't dream of interfering.

The Honest Answer

The heroine? What a time she does have wondering if she'll be happy, and if she really could care for the villain, and thinking about the sunsets in Rome and the moonlight in Cairo and the opera in London—and er—her children! Oh, the villain is quite sure that the children will be a good deal better off without her! Children always are—he says. And as for her, just think of the relief it will be never to have to worry another minute about the croup or the mumps or the measles!

And almost she is persuaded. But at the last minute she comes to, and sends the villain packing.

Nothing new about the plot—is there? Not a thing.

But the point of view—that's what strikes me.

Never once in the whole book does anybody think or say one thing about what is right and what is wrong.

Everything is all right, of course, as long as you're happy. The idea of thinking of such a thing as duty when you could be having a good time!

And nobody does think of it—not the hero, nor the heroine, nor even the villain. He doesn't have to say a word about such an old-fashioned thing or give an instant's consideration.

All very up-to-date and very broad and very enlightened—isn't it? And somehow, I couldn't help thinking a w much simpler it would have been for the heroine if she had just said the very first minute:

"Why, I'm married! I haven't the right even to think of another man for one minute."

Neither Hot Nor Cold

It all comes to the same thing in the end, anyhow.

Only—she's a little bit more selfish about it. She stays with her husband, not because she ought to, not because she promised to, not because she owes something to her children and thinks it her duty to pay what she owes—but because she decided that, on the whole, she'll be happier with husband than she would be with the villain.

What a lot of weak-kneed, shilly-shallying, can and can't, would and couldn't people they are—these modern heroines!

Not a single honest, full-blooded yes, and real, determined no among the lot.

I'm afraid I prefer a regular out-and-outer to one of them.

Hot or cold, I'll take it—my coffee or my tea—ice cold or piping hot.

Nothing lukewarm for me—even in love, thank you.

HAPPINESS AND ITS PURSUIT HERE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

LIKE all the rest of the race, you want to be happy.

Our Declaration of Independence, which is a fairly fundamental document, recognizes Happiness among the few elemental interests which a State should foster.

Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness are mentioned there as inalienable rights.

The junior senator from Massachusetts, the genial David I. Walsh, recently allowed his heart to outrun the Declaration, by requesting the Democratic party to undertake the task of "insuring every man his inalienable right to liberty and happiness."

The right of liberty we have; and it is dear almost as life itself. It is the function of the State to protect and preserve both of these. Life and Liberty are causes worth dying for.

Cannot Assume

But Happiness? Neither the most benevolently despotic autocracy nor the most nearly just and beneficent democracy—no, not even Bolshevism, Godlike in its powers though it deem itself—can assume the guaranty of Happiness.

Neither Plato in his ideal Republic, nor More in his Utopia, nor Bellamy in Looking Backward, nor Wells, our latest inventor of a perfect world (of the imagination) sought to assure Happiness to the earth and to the inhabitants thereof.

A wise bit of American Scriptures, that Declaration—wise in its day and sufficient for succeeding generations, in being content to recognize our right to the PURSUIT of Happiness!

Yes, it is enough for the State to protect us in the pursuit. Senator Walsh, with all his well-meaning, cannot go beyond that.

And, after all, that is sufficient—and better! To pursue is better than to attain, be it happiness or any other human good.

Unless indeed, attainment is used as the basis for aspiration and further achievement! Do you remember how we used to debate that question at school? Namely, whether pursuit or achievement is preferable.

May Be Debatable

As an academic question that may be debatable," but not as a problem in practical living. We know, from however little thought or experience, that Life means not arrival, but continuous travel.

There is deep significance in the popular song, "I Don't Know Where I'm Going, But I'm on the Way!" Of course, you would do well, in addition, to make sure of your direction at least, even if you cannot discover your destination.

Your Song of Life is both wiser and happier when it proclaims that you know now whither you are going, and therefore you're glad you're on the way!

After all, too, we are not nearly so much after happiness as in our happy-go-lucky philosophy we think we are.

Our one supreme concern, when we are earnest and honest with ourselves, is not happiness but Holiness.

Perhaps that is using an ancient and solemn-sounding word, for which our modern equivalent might be Self-fulfillment. Or, if you please, spell Holiness as Wholeness.

Not that we choose to be long-faced and to eschew Happiness! On the contrary, the one way to secure Happiness is not by purchasing it, but by seeking expression, realization, fulfillment, completeness, wholeness of your nature, your personality, your individuality, yourself.

A By-Product

Inevitably you will find happiness as a by-product of normal functioning, whether on the physical, the intellectual, the moral or the spiritual plane; whether in the personal or the social life, and in whatever sphere of relationship.

However, neither physical indulgence, nor intellectual exercise, nor moral interest, nor spiritual devotion, nor work, nor play; none of these in themselves can assure you happiness.

But the well-balanced pursuit of all of these, in the process of living—as an individual and as a related being—will give you never-suspended and ever-increasing dividends of happiness.

Like all the rest of the race, you want to be happy.

Well, you can assure yourself that desirable dividend from the inexhaustible capital of life.

And even you can guarantee yourself happiness only by ceasing to seek and pursue it!

They used to say: Be good and you'll be happy. We would say: Live wisely and well—and Happiness will take care of itself.
